"One Poor Child"
No War This Time
The Turtle Boat Arrives

From Europe comes the very biggest. Not the kind who don't count, but Lloyd George, new man, from nowhere, most powerful, real European ruler. Also Balfour, of modern smoothness, ancient lineage, dating back to Queen Elizabeth's Lord Burleigh. They come not merely to discuss "the Pacific problem," or armaments.

Soon they will change the "arms conference" to a "cash conference."

Reduction in armaments would help Europe. Cutting off eleven thousand million dollars that Europe owes us would help more. Efforts are made to prepare the public mind for news that our loans to Europe must be charged to experience. What is your opinion?

One American life appears on the book of the recording angel in various different chapters.

A young girl, extremely pretty, and good until men got hold of her. The worst got her. One, worst of them all, was murdered by another; first a fool, then a maniac.

The maniac is in his cell; the other in his grave. The girl, grown old in a few years, poor and abandoned, took poison yesterday.

Evelyn Thaw is her name. A dozen photographs of her taken a year apart, would tell one story of civilization's work.

You might write under the dozen photographs Goethe's line: "Thou poor child, what has man done to thee?"

One war has passed over us. No railroad strike now. May the victors, private owners of railroads, not misunderstand, to an unduly great.

Those among them that object to "government management" will observe that without government management and power their roads would be idle next Tuesday and they without income.

They say proudly, "We can manage our properties," but they can't, and know it.

They couldn't keep going if the public did not give them money in lumps of five hundred millions at a time taken from the pockets of taxpayers. And they could not keep their workmen if the power of government were not used on the side of the public convenience against the workers' unions.

If that strike had come it would have cost this country, in hard cash, more than our five years of Civil War.

With the new invention suggested by Lake, father of the submarine builder, human beings in traveling and fighting will have invaded every animal field. They fly in the air and fight there. They swim and fight on the water. They swim below the water and fight. They imitate the moles and worms in their trenches. Now Lake advises a submarine to come up from the water on rails, travel along the ground, then go back under water and swim.

The question is: Will the idea be used first by Japanese to take Russia by surprise by traveling under the ice of Lake Baikal, always frozen in Winter? Or will the idea be used to establish all-year-round water freight on the lakes?

Will W. J. Connors start his amphibious freight land-submarine down under ice at Buffalo to crawl ashore at Chicago, Milwaukee and way stations? The turtle did it ten million years ago.

A savage Kaffir, "with horns like those of a springbok," will soon be brought from Africa to London. So they say, but it sounds unlikely.

Evolution doesn't teach that we came up through the antelope tribe. Many children are born with gills open on their necks, apparently confirming the theory that our ears were formerly gills on a fish.

Michael Angelo, it is true, put small, goat-like horns on his magnificent statue of Moses in the Church of St. Peter in chains, but he was deceived by a mistaken Bible translation.

Traditions that carry us back to half animal man persist in showing our ancestors with horns and hoofs of animals; but do not believe it.

Man Shot in Waltham Chase

WOUNDED MAN HELD BY POLICE

Two Captured in Chase for Thieves Near Waltham Freight Yards

Shot through the right leg in a wild chase through streets surrounding the Waltham (North) Station today, John T. Sicko, twenty-eight years old, of Elm street, Charlestown, was in the Waltham Hospital today guarded by police and charged with attempted larceny.

At the same time John Frank Duggan, also twenty-eight, of Arlington avenue, Charlestown, was before the Waltham court, charged with being an accessory to the robbery attempt.

Duggan was held in $5,000 until Wednesday, when his case will be heard.

For several weeks freight thieves have been preying on cars in the Waltham freight yards, and special officers were placed on duty to watch shipments.

A touring car was seen to draw up on Beaver street, opposite the yards, and two men alighted, a third driving the car a few hundred yards down the street.

Special Officers Frank Sliney and John Atchison, coming suddenly upon the men, drew their revolvers and shouted "Hands up!"

At the pair started to flee Sliney fired and Sieberti dropped, a bullet through his leg. Atchison gave chase, but the fugitive escaped by dashing through back yards and over fences.

A short time later the officers came upon an automobile driving down main street, near Lexington street, and captured Duggan.

CANADIAN PACIFIC HELD UP BY FLOODS

Vancouver, Oct. 29. — Eastbound trains on the Canadian Pacific Railway were held here today owing to floods in the Fraser Valley. The Coquitlam River began to overflow Thursday because of heavy rain. Tracks are under water in many places and at least one trestle has been swept away. Mud slides have added to the danger of operating trains.

JAPANESE DELEGATES ARE HELD UP BY FOG

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 29.—The steamer Kashima Maru, with Prince Tokugawa and other Japanese delegates to the armament conference at Washington aboard, was fog-bound off Swiftsure Light, ten miles from Cape Flattery, where she cast anchor last night. If the fog lifts the steamer will reach Victoria today.

EX-BOSS CROKER AND WIFE SAIL FOR IRELAND

New York, Oct. 29.—Richard Croker, former chief of Tammany Hall, was a passenger with his wife on the steamship Cedric today, returning to their home in Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Croker had been in the United States for several months on a visit.

DAVE DESHLER HELD ON NARCOTIC CHARGE

Dave Deshler, former lightweight champion of New England, faced the Cambridge Court today charged with having narcotic drugs in his possession. His case was continued until Thursday. Deshler was taken in a raid.

NEW YORKERS WELCOMING CHIEF OF ALLIED ARMIES

The popularity of the soldier who led millions in conquering Germany was shown by the demonstration he received at the metropolis. The streets were packed and from every point where a human being could find standing room there came cheers for the military genius. A photograph of the marshal as he appears today is shown above.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw Is Reported Out of Danger

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 29.—Evelyn Nesbit, former wife of Harry K. Thaw, who yesterday attempted suicide by taking morphine, was reported to be out of danger today.

A report from her Fifty-second street apartment over the Evelyn Nesbit Specialty Shop, said she was getting along well, but had not spoken of her act.

Unknown to her, $16,000 had been realized from the sale of Miss Nesbit's objects d'art within the last two days—enough to tide her over the financial difficulties which caused her to attempt to take her life, it was learned.

Miss Nesbit's mother arrived from Pittsburgh today. She found her daughter sleeping peacefully. Friends of the former actress were planning steps to relieve her financial distress. It was reported that a theatrical benefit might be given.

FOCH CALLS ON HARDING AS GREAT CROWD CHEERS

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 29.—With a flourish of trumpets and the cheers of a huge crowd ringing in his ears, Marshal Foch, leader of the allied armies in the World War, called at the White House today and was received by President Harding.

Accompanied by Ambassador Jusserand and General Pershing, and under the escort of a troop of cavalry, the Marshal was greeted by throngs along Pennsylvania avenue.

The White House grounds were jammed with people, who cheered wildly as the Marshal entered.

At the White House entrance the Marshal was received with much pomp and ceremony, and he bowed in response to the cheers as he crossed the broad veranda entering the executive mansion.

Among the formal calls which Marshal Foch made today was one paid called on Secretary of State Hughes, Secretary of the Navy Denby and Chief Justice Taft, visited the War Department, and then went to see the former President, just before going to the White House, as the luncheon guest of President Harding.

The dignified national capital, long used to distinguished guests, set aside its blase airs and paid enthusiastic tribute to Marshal Foch. Not since General Lafayette visited Washington, in 1824, has there been so great a demonstration for a foreign visitor as that paid Marshal Foch.

The activities of the marshal while in Washington will be tempered with moderation, upon orders of his physician, who has not intention of letting the distinguished French general wear himself out in response to the enthusiastic demands upon his time.

FEAR RING TRAPPED RICH MAN

Aged Maine Citizen, Long Missing, Is Being Hunted by Officials Here

Has Sumner Coleman, rich Maine lumberman, fallen a prey to the wiles of the Boston blackmail ring?

It is the belief of County Attorney Titcomb of Biddeford, Me., that he has. The Maine authorities today set in motion the machinery to try to find Coleman in Boston.

Worth $100,000 and seventy years old, Coleman was last seen in Portland six weeks ago.

He took a train from Boston to Portland, arrived in the morning and returned to Boston at night.

This much has been learned from trainmen on the Boston & Maine who knew him.

Leaving Portland in April he had $6,000. The county attorney believes that, funds exhausted, Coleman returned to Portland for more money. Titcomb was today checking up the lumberman's accounts in Portland banks.

Titcomb ridicules the idea that Coleman may have met foul play and declared that in Portland sharpsters had victimized him to the extent of $1,000.

Search for the lumberman was started when friends failed to find him at his summer home at North Kennebunk and when it became known that he had not been seen at the Tolman House in Portland, where he lived when there, since last April.

Friends advanced the theory that he had met foul play, but the county authorities were skeptical. Investigation in Boston showed he had not been at the Crawford House, where he usually made his headquarters.

Making a fortune in timber land, Mr. Coleman also was interested in a block of farm near Portland and in the manufacture of motion picture films in Portland.

RAIN FOR BOSTON PROBABLE ON SUNDAY

A storm now over the Mississippi valley will bring rain probably tomorrow afternoon or evening, according to the official forecast today. There will not be much change in temperature, and moderate easterly winds tonight will become increasingly strong tomorrow. The lowest temperature in the country at eight o'clock today was 36, at Concord, N. H., while the highest in New England was 50, at Nantucket. Boston's lowest was 43, at 4 a. m.

SCHOOL CHILDREN ASKED TO HONOR UNKNOWN DEAD

Washington, Oct. 29.—Schools of the nation are asked by a Washington committee of educators, headed by Milton Fairchild, to co-operate in the memorial services for the unknown dead at Arlington on Armistice Day. The War Department, it was announced today, has sent to this committee material from which a report of the services can be prepared for distribution through the country [illegible] in assembly halls of elementary and high schools.

HINDENBERG'S AUNT DIES IN ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Mme. Emma Von Saucken, aunt of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Lucy Whitman, No. 194 Conkey avenue, here today. She was 99 years of age and came here with her husband sixty years ago.

Brewers Can Sell Beer on Hand

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Brewers will be permitted to sell beer, which they now have on hand, for medicinal purposes, it was announced officially by the Treasury Department today.

Dry advocates have protested against the sale of beer which has accumulated in the breweries and have urged that only such beer as has been manufactured since the issuance of the beer-for-medicine regulations should be permitted to be sold.

If such a ruling were issued it would delay the sale of medicinal beer for some weeks.

Secretary Mellon on Monday is expected to issue a formal ruling permitting the sale of beer now held by brewers.

4 FIREMEN HURT IN $100,000 LYNN BLAZE

Explosion Hurls Men From Ladders in Central Square; Swampscott Aids

Four firemen were injured when a hot-air explosion wrecked a blazing four-story building on Central square, Lynn, at the height of a fire that did damage estimated at over $100,000 and threatened the centre of the Lynn business district.

The fire was discovered shortly after 1 o'clock this morning. Soon every piece of fire-fighting apparatus in Lynn and two companies from Swampscott had arrived, while the entire police force was called out to be ready in case the fire should spread farther.

The interior of the building was destroyed. Extension ladders were placed against the walls to enable the firemen to direct streams of water into the heart of the blaze. As the men swarmed over the ladders, clinging to their insecure footholds high above the ground, grimy and hatless, there came a loud explosion, followed instantly by a deafening crash.

Several of the ladders were thrown backward, carrying the firemen to the pavement, while the floors of the building, which was mainly occupied by the R. S. Hauer stationery store, collapsed in a shower of sparks.

Four of the firemen who were thrown to the ground were taken to the Lynn General Hospital for treatment for bruises and possible internal injuries. They were Lieutenant Frank Chamberlain, Lieutenant Frank Rooney and Firemen Frank Gowdy and Philip Bourgeois. Several others received minor injuries.

SACCO AND VANZETTI ASK NEW TRIAL

Unusual Precautions Taken by Authorities as Hearing Starts in Dedham

Shackled to each other and to two officers and surrounded by more than 100 armed guards, Nicola Sacco and Bartolmeo Vanzetti marched from their cells in the jail to Superior Court, Dedham, today, for the opening of the hearing on their application for a new trial on the charge of murdering a South Braintree paymaster and guard.

The two men about whom the Communists of this country and the Reds all over the world have rallied since their conviction last June appeared to be in fairly good spirits.

Sacco especially was most cheerful and smiled and bowed as he walked through the streets. In the court room he nodded to some of the court attendants and bowed to Judge Webster.

Vanzetti, who is serving a fifteen-year sentence for an attempted hold-up and robbery in Bridgewater, and who has been imprisoned in the State Prison in Charlestown, was taken to Dedham early in the morning under a special guard.

He appeared depressed and scowled as he left the jail and started his walk to the courthouse, two blocks away.

SAYS JURY WAS INFLUENCED.

His attorney, Jeremiah J. McAnarney, opened the argument after Frederick H. Moore, counsel for Sacco asked permission of Judge Thayer to file later in the day a supplementary motion for a new trial, which would incorporate certain questions of fact which he declared had arisen since the first motion was filed.

GUARDS RUSHED TO COURT AT SACCO TRIAL

Stutzmayer in opening his argument said that the jury had been influenced in the verdict of guilty by the "elaborate precautions taken by the State at the trial," and then proceeded to attack the sentence given by some of the prosecution witnesses.

He covered much the same ground taken by the defence at the trial.

Moore explained to the court that certain alleged irregularities had taken place in the jury room during the trial, which constituted a question of fact that had not been incorporated in the first motion. He said he would delay the hearing but a few moments when the matter, which was being typewritten, was ready for submission.

Twenty picked men of the Boston police riot squad, commanded by Lieut. Daniel Lane and armed with the new model riot guns, ten mounted men of the State Constabulary and six motorcycle men of the same force similarly armed, together with sixty odd special officers and deputy sheriffs, were on duty when the hearing opened at 9 o'clock.

Lieutenant George E. Burke commanded the mounted constabulary and Captain George A. Parker was in charge of the motorcycle men.

FEDERAL BUILDING GUARDED.

In Boston the Federal authorities had closed all doors to the Federal building except two on Milk street.

These and similar precautions followed the receipt of information that a Communist had been formed in New York to attack the courthouse today when the convicted men appeared.

A detachment of plain clothes men and special officers were stationed at the South Station all night watching for the arrival of the Communist band, the members of whom were reported to be dressed in U. S. army uniforms and armed with automatic pistols.

Special guards were stationed at the Federal Building Garage and one of the building closed to the public except two leading to Devonshire street.

Inside the building guards armed with belts of cartridges and automatic pistols were stationed at elevated points. Six guards were on duty all night at the tunnel through which the mail trucks enter and leave the building, and at each of the two open doors special guards were posted with orders to examine every person entering the building.

SPECIAL GUARDS.

For several days there have been special guards of the State police on duty at the State House and other public buildings. The custodian of the Federal building was instructed to night attendants that all leave has been stopped until further notice.

The Worcester police are still keeping a special guard about the home of Judge Webster Thayer, the presiding judge in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and Judge's wife and daughter at their home. Judge Thayer himself, although he admits that he has received a number of letters regarding the case, has steadfastly refused to accept the offers of a bodyguard which have been made by the Federal and State officials.

Vanzetti, who has been under strict guard at State Prison, was taken from his cell early today, and accompanied by Deputy Warden Hogsett and Guard Arthur Griffin was to go to Dedham to appear in court when his case and that of Sacco opened.

While the prison authorities admitted today that they have received threatening letters in connection with the Sacco-Vanzetti case, they denied having taken any special precautions.

It was understood, however, that if Vanzetti is sentenced to die in the death house on Rutherford street for his crime, that arrangements are already under way for him to have a special guard about that building. This guard will be armed with pistols and machine guns and the streets near the death house will be roped off to keep strangers at a respectful distance.

UNDER SENTENCE.

Vanzetti has been confined in the prison instead of at the Dedham jail, where Sacco is being held, because he is under sentence of fifteen years for his part in an armed holdup and robbery in Bridgewater.

In Dedham the authorities are taking no chances. During the night guards were thrown around the jail. Special officers were ordered on duty inside and outside the court house during the hearing on the new trial application today. Both principals were to be in court, and it is understood that the authorities have received warning that Communists and other friends of the two convicted men planned to stage a demonstration in their behalf.

S. LIPSIT SHOE CO. IN BANKRUPTCY COURT

The S. Lipsit Shoe Company of Brockton was petitioned into bankruptcy in Federal Court today by three creditors whose claims total $8,565.61. John J. Keaney, of Brockton, has the largest claim, $6,750. Edward W. Darney, a plumber of Worcester, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, giving his liabilities as $1,953.23 and his assets as nothing.

ARREST EXPECTED SOON IN BROADWAY MAIL THEFT

New York, Oct. 29.—The green automobile used by three bandits in last Monday's $1,500,000 mail truck robbery has been identified and the net is drawing close about at least one of the thieves, Chief Postoffice Inspector Cochrane said today. It was indicated an arrest might be made before night.

MRS. JOHN R. MURPHY TURNS SWITCH FOR HIGH PRESSURE TEST

MRS. MURPHY AIDING BOSTON FIREMEN

HIGH PRESSURE SYSTEM TEST WORKS WELL

New Boston Fire Fighting Outfit Gets Trial After Delay of 10 Years

When Mrs. John R. Murphy, wife of the candidate for Mayor of Boston at the coming election, connected a switch at the plant of the Edison Illuminating Company today, she set in motion the gigantic pumps supplying high pressure for fire fighting that is expected to result in the elimination of steamers or gas pumps at the scene of fires.

With the pressure of the switch the pumps in the Edison plant threw a 150-pound pressure to the hydrant. When the firemen turning out the system on Atlantic avenue coupled up the hose, a 125-foot stream was immediately obtained.

While the test today was unofficial, the headquarters expressed full satisfaction with the results.

Without the loss of friction from the bore a 200-foot stream could be obtained, it was pointed out. The trial was made after ten years of what Commissioner Murphy termed needless delay.

The high pressure system, which has been in use in New York and other large cities for some time, is designed to do away with the necessity of coupling up a pump at the scene of a fire.

Through an arrangement at the hydrant the pressure can be regulated by the company alone.

Pumps will be sent out for emergency purposes, however, to make sure that there would be no loss of time should any accident ensue to the pumps at the lighting plant.

The entire downtown district will be covered by the new system until finished.

MacSWINEY MEMORIAL SERVICES TOMORROW

The Executive Committee of the State Directorate, American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, has completed arrangements for memorial services to the memory of Terence MacSwiney, late mayor of Cork, Ireland, at Tremont Theatre tomorrow at 3 o'clock.

John Boylan, lineal descendant of John Morton, who signed the Declaration of Independence, will preside.

Memorial exercises for MacSwiney will also be held tomorrow evening under the auspices of the Gaelic School in A. O. H. Hall, Hibernian Building, Roxbury, and by Milford Council in St. Joseph's Hall, Parkway, Charles street; Michael Davitt Council, in Paine Hall, Appleton street; Padraic Pearse Council, in Pilgrim Hall, South Boston; John Mitchell Council, Mishawum Hall, Charlestown; in A. O. H. Hall, Stoneham, under the auspices of the John F Cody Council.

O'CONNOR PROMISES CITY JOBS TO WOMEN

Charles S. O'Connor, candidate for mayor, will tonight discuss taxation and assessing at a meeting of the Taxpayers' League to be held in the Dorchester High School. Last night Mr. O'Connor was the speaker at a rally held by the Women's Democratic Club at Ward 8 at 61 Tremont street. He said in part:

"As this is a gathering of women I want to say here and now that one of the planks in my platform is a square deal for women voters in city appointments. I can promise you now that under my administration there will be a woman member of the election commission, and I will also have a woman appointed to the Health Department and other places, too, where women ought to serve."

Champagne Caused Failure of Plot by Charles

By International News Service.

Berlin, Oct. 29.—Former Emperor Charles' taste for champagne was chiefly responsible for the failure of his royalist coup, according to news from Budapest today.

It is now believed certain in many circles in Hungary that the monarchist adventure would have succeeded in taking Budapest by surprise if Charles and his generals had acted swiftly.

But upon arriving at Czabrag Charles wasted twenty-four hours in celebrating his "triumphant return" with an elaborate champagne feast.

Former Empress Zita is said to have remonstrated against the delay, pointing out to her husband that every minute counted. The ex-monarch was so sure of success, however, that he moved with the utmost leisure.

It now develops that the battle on Sunday was decided against Charles' monarchist forces by volunteer high school students.

ELOPING LYNN BRIDE IS FORGIVEN

Winnifred E. Grinnell, one of Lynn's prettiest girls, and William Carroll, a Boston automobile dealer, are on a honeymoon today, following an elopement.

They were married in Portland, Me., Thursday.

The mother of the bride, who lives at No. 148 Willow street, Lynn, received a telegram containing the news of the elopement and asking her blessing and forgiveness. She granted all when the couple returned to Lynn yesterday.

Thursday, at noon, Miss Grinnell told her mother she was going shopping. Instead she took a train for Portland, where Carroll was waiting for her. The marriage ceremony took place in a Portland church.

ANTI-KU-KLUX PARTY ON NEW YORK BALLOT

New York, Oct. 29.—The Anti-Ku-Klux party will have a place on the ballot in the city election, November 8, the Board of Elections announced today. The party's only nominee is Edward S. Dreyer, candidate for judges of General Sessions Court in Manhattan. An arrow is the party's emblem.

DAMAGE FROM DEDHAM BLAZE IS $3,000

More than $3,000 damage was done to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Goeppner, No. 64 Riverside drive, in the Pine Hills section of Dedham by a fire which started from an undetermined cause. The occupants were out at the time. A small garage was also burned and the home of John Armstrong, adjoining, was scorched.

SHOE WORKERS URGED TO FIGHT WAGE CUT

Opposition to Longer Working Day Also Advocated by Union Chiefs

New England shoe workers were called upon today by leading union chiefs of Boston, Lynn and Haverhill to resist the proposed 13 to 20 per cent. cut in their wages.

They further appealed to fight any effort to lengthen their working day.

The following resolution, signed by M. J. McGarty of Lynn, president of the Allied Shoe Councils; Joseph Gorette of Haverhill, business agent of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, and Howard Blaisdell of Boston, a member of the executive board of the United Shoe Workers of America, was sent to the rank and file of the union members:

"We, the chosen representatives of the United Shoe Workers of America, the Shoe Workers' Protective Union and the Allied Shoe Workers, representing 45,000 shoe workers in New England, assembled in conference in Lasters' Hall, Lynn, to discuss the campaign of propaganda being conducted by the employers' associations for a 20 per cent. wage reduction, have after a discussion of all factors entering into the present business depression, resolved to determined[ly] oppose with our utmost effort and all our resources any and all attempts to reduce wages, lengthen hours or in any way change the present standard of living. We call upon all shoe workers to fight."

PROPOSED 20 PER CENT. CUT.

The conference of union chiefs was called after Lynn Shoe Manufacturers' Association proposed that the men submit to a 20 per cent. cut, mostly in bonuses.

Other manufacturers' associations elsewhere have proposed cuts ranging from 13 to 20 per cent.

It has been generally suggested by the employers that the men agree to the reductions, as the shoe workers of Rochester, N. Y., recently submitted to a 10 per cent. reduction.

The Lynn shoe workers and most of the other New England operatives' work under a peace agreement which remains in force until next January. Union leaders today indicated that they would insist on the present schedule until the conclusion of the various "peace pacts."

The stories of the employers concerning the need for lower wages or else loss of trade to New England [illegible] unfounded.

RESTS BLAMED.

One Lynn labor leader said that the excessive rents paid for floor space by Lynn manufacturers were more to blame for high operating costs than were wages.

It is unlikely that any disagreement between employers and employes as to wages will result in strikes or lockouts this Winter, because of the various peace agreements.

The joint council of the United Shoe Workers of America is going to confer with the manufacturers on the whole wage question shortly. Most of the individual unions are opposed to taking any wage cut.

NEW ENGLAND YARN RAIL RATES HELD UP

Washington, Oct. 29.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today suspended until Dec. 27, 1921, the operation of certain freight schedules providing for cancellation of the existing carload and less than carload commodity rates on woolen yarn from Skowhegan, Me., to Boston, North Andover and Lawrence, Mass., and other points in New England and trunkline territory.

This action leaves class rates applicable instead, the operation of which was suspended until Nov. 1, 1921, by a previous order of the commission.

WIRELESS PHONES FOR PITTSBURGH FIREMEN

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 29.—Wireless telephone stations will be installed in all volunteer engine company houses in Allegheny County and in the city fire department, Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pew announced today after a station had been set up in his private office. He said that he would equip his automobile with wireless apparatus so that he would be informed of fires in any part of his district while making inspection tours.

LONESOME HUB SOLDIER APPEALS TO PETERS

A touching letter from a lonesome soldier longing for a letter from home was received by Mayor Peters today and turned over to the Boston American. The letter was signed Private William Troup, No. 1201, Camp Benning, Ga. "A lonesome soldier boy," he said, "from God's country and would like to hear from home. Could you, if possible, have my letter placed in one of the leading newspapers of Boston and have someone drop me a line to where I am leading a lonesome existence?"

VERMONT LEGIONERS LEAVE FOR CONVENTION

50 LOSE 8 FEET OF WAISTLINE IN 11 DAYS

New York, Oct. 29.—Fifty fat women, who are engaged in a price reducing contest under city auspices, have lost eight feet of aggregate waistline in eleven days, Health Commissioner Copeland announced today. The member of the class who has reduced the most in circumference has lost six inches. The greatest decrease in poundage is 19½.

FREILINGHUYSEN IN PLEA FOR SALES TAX

Asks Senators to Cast Aside Political Considerations and Vote for Measure

By Universal Service.

Washington, Oct. 29. — A plea to cast aside political considerations and vote for the sales tax as the best an equitable readjustment of the tax burden, was voiced by Senator Frelinghuysen, Republican, of New Jersey, in the Senate.

Senator Frelinghuysen made his appeal while Republican Senate leaders were endeavoring to speed up the revenue measure for a final vote before tonight. He said:

"The sales tax is not an attempt to remove the burden of supporting the government by means of repeal of the excess profits and high surtaxes from the rich and then place it upon the shoulders of the consuming public by a tax on all they purchase.

"It is only an attempt to make more simple and collectable a system which has become a burden to the average taxpayer. The excess profits and surtaxes have been passed on from price to price in an unending scale which has not contributed to the decline of the high cost of living.

"The high surtaxes have occasioned a diminishing return upon investment of capital in new enterprises, upon industry in general, and therefore upon the purchasing power of the wage earner, five millions of whom are today without work."

Senator Frelinghuysen opposed the increase in the maximum surtax rates to 50 per cent. He said that the rate should be kept at 12½ per cent, he declared.

MISS EDITH COHEN OF DORCHESTER ENGAGED

Dorchester and Malden Jewish social circles are much interested in the engagement, just announced, of Miss Edith Cohen of Dorchester and Albert M. Gordon of Malden.

The young people, who are prominently identified with the younger social sets of their districts, have a large circle of acquaintances in both places.

Miss Cohen is the older daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cohen of No. 12 De Roy street, Dorchester. She was graduated with honors from the Dorchester High School last year. She is a popular member of the Y. W. H. A.

ORANGEMEN OF BOSTON IN PARADE TOMORROW

Several thousand Orangemen from all over Greater Boston are expected to join in the parade under the direction of the State Grand Lodge of the Loyal Orange Institution tomorrow preliminary to a meeting in Trenton Temple in aid of the Thanksgiving donation to the Orange Orphans' Home in Philadelphia. The marchers, headed by the Royal Black Knights, British Vets Band of Bell Rock Fife and Drum Corps, will form in Copley Square at 2 o'clock and march down Boylston street and Tremont street to Tremont Temple.

Rev. John McClelland of South Boston, Rev. William McNair of Cambridge, Rev. A. A. Hideout of Milton and Rev. William D. Rutledge of Whitman will speak.

SINN FEINERS' VICE-PRESIDENT COMING HERE

Queenstown, Oct. 29.—The Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, Vice-President of the Sinn Fein, called today on the steamer Centennial State for New York. Father O'Flanagan is coming to the United States as an envoy of the Sinn Fein to assist, it is announced, "in putting the case of the Irish Republic before the American people."

Dancing and Gayety at the Restaurants

HOTELS PREPARE FOR BIG EVENTS MONDAY

Dancing and Gayety as Hallowe'en Is Celebrated at Leading Hostelries

Boston hotels are making great preparations for entertaining thousands of guests next Monday night to properly celebrate Hallowe'en.

Special dinners will be served at the leading hostelries with dancing and favors to add to the evening's enjoyment. Many reservations have already been made and the outlook is that most of the hotels will be crowded to capacity.

The chefs are busy preparing special menus to appease the appetite of the most discriminating diner.

The Brunswick, American House, Westminster, Marlave's, Dreyfus, Mahawk and the Grand will all offer special entertainment and the magic of the pumpkin and witches will run riot.

FAMOUS RATHSKELLER

Here we have the first Rathskeller in Boston created by Allen C. Jones, whose guiding hand has made such a wonderful success of the enterprise. With the advent of prohibition the hotels were confronted with the problem of keeping up their high standard, and at the American House Mr. Jones has been personally responsible for the phenomenal success that has greeted them.

The great popularity of this famous eating place is due to the personal popularity of its genial proprietor, combined with the best of service and food, served in the right sort of way at right prices. Dancing every evening; music by two orchestras.

DREYFUS DELIGHTS

As cold weather comes on this French restaurant increases in popularity among those who appreciate good cooking and an atmosphere of refinement. The management is catering [illegible] or dinner, with to know of a place to have surroundings will be congenial and food well cooked and served beyond reproach. Established in 1892, this is probably the original French restaurant of Boston. Large and small dinner and banquet parties continually find the Dreyfus a source of delight.

FAMOUS MARLIAVE'S

John Doug O'Riley was always satisfied when he dined at the Mariave Cafe. The Mariave, over fifty years old, is one of the oldest and best cafes in boston, situated at No. 11 Bosworth street, an old landmark.

Mr. Burnatzin, the present proprietor, says the Mariave still holds its reputation for the fine dinners and excellent service as were given during the days when ex-Governor Hanson, Garfield and other great men were guests.

CHINESE COOKING

A most picturesque American and Chinese restaurant is the Grand Garden, No. 649 Washington street. An Oriental dish served there, together with the many outstanding, almost makes one believe they are in foreign lands. The furnishings are of beautiful imported teak wood, with hundreds of scintillating lights and shining wood booths. A trip to the Orient can be enjoyed by a visit to the Grand Garden. Excellent service, food and cabaret.

MOHAWK GROWING

There are two reasons for the particular popularity and phenomenal growth of patronage at the Mohawk Spa, namely Victor and Leon Pini. These two chefs are doing for the Mohawk Spa and dining room what they had previously done for the famous Woodcock which place they are largely responsible for making famous because of their ability in their particular line of endeavor.

The ability of these men is not limited in any sense in the cafe business, as is proven by their success in the conducting of the entire management of the Mohawk organization. The new arrangements inaugurated by them a few weeks ago, when they announced that uniform prices would be maintained in both the dining room and the cafe, have resulted in the most rapid growth known to any business of this kind in a long time.

Victor Pini says: "There is no trick in serving food at a high price, but it is really accomplishment to serve excellent appetizing food at a very moderate cost. We believe that along with our quick, polite service, is what is making the Mohawk name famous."

FATHER SURE SLAIN BOY WAS K. R. LOSEY

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 29.—M. D. Losey of Northport, L. I., today positively identified the body of the young man who died and thrown into Niagara River as that of his son, Kenneth D. Losey, twenty-year-old student at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Ct. He was unable to account for his son's visit here and was inclined to believe that he had been brought here against his will.

TWO HURT IN 1-MAN CAR CRASH IN CAMBRIDGE

Two persons were badly cut and bruised today when a one-man car of the Boston Elevated struck a pedler's wagon at Portsmouth and Hampshire streets, Cambridge. The wagon was driven by William Levine of No. [illegible] street, Cambridge, and [illegible] when the car came along and was unable to stop. The wagon was demolished and Levine, his friend and Abraham Cohen, a seven-year-old boy with him, were hurled to the street.

CAMBRIDGE BOY BADLY JAMMED IN ELEVATOR

Just as Albert Mottelo, nine years old, of No. 7 Jefferson street, East Cambridge, stepped on a safety flooring over an elevator well in the John C. Dow rendering plant at No. 320 Portland street, Cambridge, today the elevator came up. The boy was pinned between the opening floor and a post. At the Cambridge Municipal Hospital it was said a hip was fractured and he was badly injured internally.

HAPPY.

HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATION

Fortunately, people differ in their tastes and preferences. We do not all like the same people, things or places.

The American House is operated with a view to please a very definite but very large clientele. Successful accomplishment of this purpose has necessitated a method of operation essentially different from the methods followed by other restaurants. No other restaurant, anywhere, bears close resemblance to the American House.

Probably the Rathskeller would suit your preference exactly. Why not take luncheon, dinner or late supper there today?

BRYAN SEES POSSIBILITY OF GREAT U. S. ARMY IF PARLEY FAILS

NO CHANCE FOR PEACE BY FORCE

That propaganda for an army and navy larger than ever before will be instituted, if the conference for the limitation of armament fails, was predicted by William Jennings Bryan before an audience of 500 at the Boston City Club.

Mr. Bryan was introduced by Mayor Andrew J. Peters. As he rose to his feet to commence his speech, the hall rang with cheers, and it was some moments before he could begin.

Although disarmament was the avowed subject of his speech, he did not fail to touch in characteristic style on prohibition.

WORLD'S GREATEST REFORM.

"Don't be discouraged," he said, "if prohibition is not perfectly enforced at first. It was the greatest reform by ballot in the world's history, and by adopting it, we have reached the highest point ever reached by any nation in the battle against evil.

"When the Palmer ruling was passed, the wets thought they saw a ray of sunshine. It turned out, however, to be moonshine. As for the medical beer ruling, for a real wet, medical beer is merely tantalizing."

Bryan refused to hazard a guess as to the success of the conference for the limitation of armament.

"That conference," he said, "may become the greatest gathering in thousands of years. If they succeed, the world will never turn back. In six months from today, we may have a happier day even than Armistice Day was three years ago.

CANNOT KEEP PEACE BY FORCE.

"We cannot keep the peace of the world by force. If the men who come to the conference believe we can, the conference will fail.

"This nation must go as far as any nation in furthering disarmament and perpetual peace. We should hang a sign on the door of the conference chamber, saying: 'The United States stands ready to go as far as any nation in the world.'

"The sessions of the conference must be open. Open sessions will go farther toward disarmament than any other factor.

"Finally, if this conference fails, this nation has another duty before it can surrender to the forces of militarism. If governments will not support disarmament, this nation must lead the people of other nations to overturn their cabinets and governments who will seek for peace more earnestly."

CAMBRIDGE MAYOR ASKS AID FOR UNEMPLOYED

Property owners in Cambridge have been urged in a proclamation issued by Mayor Edward W. Quinn, to cooperate with the city in providing work for the Cambridge unemployed. The Mayor states it makes no difference whether the work is for a few days or for a few hours; whether skilled or unskilled.

A survey is now being made by a special committee appointed by the Mayor and it is hoped that as fast as returns come in they may be assigned some work. In connection with the plans the committee is also drafting a letter which is to be sent to each of the 139 manufacturers in the city.

DEDHAM WOMAN FATALLY STRICKEN IN THEATRE

The body of a woman who collapsed in the lobby of a Washington street theatre and died several minutes later has been identified as that of Miss Sarah Stewart Benedict, sixty-five years old, of No. 19 Helige street, Dedham.

Death was due to natural causes. She was about to purchase a ticket when seized with a heart attack. Identification was made by her cousin, Hiram E. Benedict, an employe of the Boston American. Miss Benedict had been employed as a saleslady in the Jordan Marsh Company store for twenty years.

Daughter of Anna Held Wants Accounting of Mother's Estate

LIANE CARRERA

She seeks assets of her mother's $160,000 estate through courts.

New York, Oct. 29.—Miss Liane Carrera, daughter of the late Anna Held, and herself an actress living at No. 149 West 55th street, has asked the Surrogate Court to remove Charles F. Hanlon of San Francisco as executor of her mother's will and for an accounting. Hanlon filed an accounting last December, Miss Carrera says, and at that time was directed to turn over to her the assets of the estate, including those in Washington, California and France, but, she alleges, he has so far failed to obey the order.

The total of the estate is approximately $160,000.

BANDITS BEAT AND ROB MAN OF $800

Blackjacked in broad daylight in Somerville by two men in an auto, robbed of $800 and then tossed from the machine in the outskirts of Randolph, where he was later found wandering in a dazed condition, is the story told Somerville police by Henry Bradley of No. 28 Orchard street, Cambridge.

Bradley told the police that he was walking on Elm street, near Williams avenue, West Somerville, at 10 o'clock in the morning when two men in an auto, going in the direction of Union square, hailed him and asked if he wanted a "lift."

He thanked them for the invitation and got in. A minute later, he said, he was hit over the head with a blunt instrument. The next he remembers was when he found himself wandering in the woods. He asked a passing autoist where he was and was informed he was between Mattapan and Randolph. The autoist took Bradley to his home where he is confined as a result of his experience.

Bradley stated he went to the Old South Building in Boston, yesterday morning, to see a man named Meacham, with whom he had previously invested money. The amount was $800, he said, and he wished to have the use of it now, because of his approaching marriage on Monday to Miss Annette Cicolairi, of No. 1 Oak street, Somerville.

Meacham took him to a Cambridge bank where he drew the money from his own personal account and gave it to Bradley, who left for Somerville to see his bride and her family.

Police have been unable to locate any man by the name of Meacham in the Old South building.

DEBS HOPES TO BE GIVEN HIS LIBERTY

Denies Reports That His Health in Atlanta Prison Has Been Poor

Copyrighted, 1921, by International News Service.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 29.—Eugene V. Debs, five times candidate of the Socialist party for President of the United States and for more than a score of years recognized leader of his party in this country, but now serving a term in the Federal penitentiary here for violation of the espionage act, hopes to be out in the open world again soon.

For the first time since his incarceration, Debs today expressed to a newspaper man his hopes for freedom when he met and talked with an International News Service representative.

The genial Debs smile obliterated the marks of prison life, as the kindly old man met the reporter. His blue eyes twinkled and his handclasp was that of the former Debs, hearty, warm and firm.

Debs denied persistent reports that his health is feeble. "At this time," he stated, "I am enjoying good health, since prison weather set in, I have no complaints."

Debs has quarters in the hospital building. He has a room, a cell, but has a private room. The sun streams through the bars at his window a times during the day. On his table by the window, books and papers are arranged in orderly fashion. H spends much of his time reading and writing.

Debs is permitted to receive many letters, but is allowed only he usual prison privilege of writing twice a week.

Samuel Gompers, veteran president of the American Federation of Labor, called on Debs recently.

Gompers waited in th ewarden's office while Debs was summoned. When the two came face to face, they paused dramatically, according to witnesses of the meeting. They gazed steadily at each other a moment and then stepped forward to grasp hands. Tears came to the eyes of Debs as Gompers said:

"Mr. Debs, I am glad to see you. A long time ago—and many years ago —I used to call you 'Gene' and you called me 'Sam.' I'd like to do the same thing now."

Debs nodded assent.

GURNEY HEADS MAINE PUBLIC UTILITIES BODY

Augusta, Oct. 29.—The nomination of Charles E. Gurney of Portland, acting president of the Maine Senate, as chairman of the Public Utilities Commission was confirmed unanimously by the Executive Council today. He will succeed Judge Benjamin F. Cleaves, who resigned last April. This action terminates the deadlock which has refused of the Council to confirm the nomination of former State Senator Howard Davies of Yarmouth after four times by Governor Percival P. Baxter.

AMBULANCE CRASHES INTO STORE WINDOW

Swerving to avoid a small car, John F. Kelliher, driver of a Boston City Hospital ambulance, sent his machine over the sidewalk and crashing through a plate glass window in the store of Angelo Piccolo, on Belgrade avenue, Roslindale. There was a patient in the ambulance at the time, but both she and Kelliher escaped unharmed. Later she became a mother on her arrival at the hospital. The damage done by the crash amounts to $200.

MURDERED DAKOTA PRIEST LAID AT REST

Lead, S. D., Oct. 29.—Interest in the funeral of Father Jerome Daily, Sioux City miner, wanted in connection with the death early Wednesday of Rev. A. B. Schlenk, was centered today to the funeral of the priest Many priests were here for the services. The mass was conducted in basement and first floor of the building, with damage estimated at $2,500.

PITTSFIELD CALLED STATE'S DRIEST CITY

Pittsfield, Oct. 29.—Harold D. Wilson, State director of prohibition enforcement, has pronounced Pittsfield the driest city in the State of Massachusetts. Wilson sent out an officer disguised as a tramp, ordering him to buy a drink in each of the ten saloons. The officer languished in the pangs of thirst for three days, Wilson said, before he could locate an oasis.

POLICE AUTO KILLS FALL RIVER WOMAN

Fall River, Oct. 29.—Mrs. Jane Winstanley, sixty years old, of No. 1837 Pleasant street, was instantly killed when struck by an automobile while crossing the street near her home. The machine was owned by the police department and operated by Inspector Hugh Bogan.

"FAR EAST" PROFESSOR FOR DARTMOUTH COLLEGE

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 29.—Appointment of Professor David Crockett Wyre of Pei Yang University, Tientsin, China, to have charge of new courses in Far Eastern civilization, was announced by Dartmouth College today. He will begin his duties with the opening of the second semester and in addition will advise the faculty with regard to further elaboration of work in the lower curriculum having to do with Far Eastern affairs as relating to nations other than China.

NON-PARTISANS 25,000 BEHIND IN NORTH DAKOTA

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 29.—R. A. Beston, Independent candidate for Governor in yesterday's recall election, early today continues to hold his lead of nearly 25,000 votes over Governor Lynn J. Frazier, Non-Partisan Leaguer. The returns available were from about one-third of the precincts in the State and were from Independent strongholds, mostly in the northern cities.

CAMBRIDGE MAN DIES IN DOWNTOWN DOORWAY

John Mancles, sixty-three years old, was found dead early today in a doorway at No. 31 India street, at which address he was employed by Laura J. Dell. Dr. William Dunn, who examined him, said death was due to natural causes. Mancles lived at No. 32 Brookline street, Cambridge.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair today announced the appointment of Ralph A. Day as prohibition director for the State of New York.

STILLMANS IN BATTLE FOR TWO SONS

Mother Asks Court to Appoint Her Guardian of Boys, 17 and 11

New York, Oct. 29.—Surrogate Cohalan reserved decision on an application of Mrs. Anne U. Stillman, defendant in divorce proceedings instituted by James A. Stillman, to be made general guardian for their sons, James, seventeen years old, and Alexander, eleven. Both sides were given a week to present briefs.

Opposing the application, Outerbridge Horsey of Dr. Stillman's counsel, said the father had wisely handled James' personal property of $187,310, yielding $17,585 a year and the $1,999 in securities of the boy, the younger son. He denied the boys were specific beneficiaries under any trust funds and said their holdings were largely presents from their father and grandfather.

The upstate court in which the divorce action was filed left it to the children to choose the parent with whom they would live, and both boys remained with the mother, Mr. Horsey said, contending that for another court to rule on the matter might cause conflicts.

Counsel for Mrs. Stillman, replying to Mr. Horsey's declaration that the father did not want the boys to squander their money and that Mrs. Stillman was incompetent to handle her affairs, declared she was thoroughly equipped to care for their material as well as physical welfare.

STUDENT HURT IN EXPLOSION AT TECH

Salem Youth Burned When Combination of Chemicals Causes Blast

John R. Elffe of No. 25 Broad street, Salem, was burned about the head and face by an explosion in the organic chemical laboratory of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Elffe was pouring strong, concentrated sulphuric acid into the sink when the explosion came. A blinding flash followed, which enveloped him in flame, singeing his burning his hair and face and his coat.

There were about twenty-five other students in the laboratory at the time and they rushed to his aid after the first shock of the blast.

He was given first aid at once and then treated at the Technology clinic by Miss A. C. Hendricks, a nurse in attendance.

The explosion was explained when it was learned that another student, unknown to Elffe, had poured liquid ether into the sink just before the sulphuric acid. The mixture of the two acids resulted in the explosion.

Elffe is a junior student. His injuries, while painful, were not considered serious.

PARKER HOUSE GUESTS AROUSED BY SHOP FIRE

A fire early today in the basement of a four-story building at Nos. 40 and 42 School street caused several pieces of fire-fighting apparatus clattering over the streets and aroused the guests in the Parker House, which adjoins the rear. Clerks passed through the halls assuring the guests that there was no danger and few left their apartments. The fire was confined to the basement and first floor of the building, with damage estimated at $2,500.

FORD HALL FORUM TO HEAR OF RUSSIA

A comprehensive sizing up of the Russian Revolution, its accomplishments and its failures, will be presented by Dr. Moissaye J. Olgin at the Ford Hall Forum, tomorrow evening. Dr. Olgin's recent magazine writings, following his return from Russia last April, give evidence of a comprehensive knowledge and instinctive understanding of the Russian situation. Born a Russian and recently winning the Ph. D. degree at Columbia, he is throughly accustomed to American audiences. The address will be preceded by a recital of Russian and American songs by Joseph Ecker, baritone.

JUDGMENT OF $31,000 AGAINST EX-GOV. FOSS

Eugene N. Foss, former Governor of Massachusetts, must pay a judgment totaling $31,000 under a verdict returned in Albany, where he was sued by Attorney Howard Streeter of Detroit, for counsel fees in financial litigation handled for Foss by Streeter years ago. Streeter had asked $60,000, claiming that he had never been paid a cent for his services. The verdict calls for a payment of $25,000 with $6,000 interest.

GETS YEAR IN JAIL FOR RAISING $2 BILL

BOSTON EGG COMPANY PAYS FINE OF $1,250

The Boston Egg Company of Fulton street paid of fine of $1,250 in the Federal Court, imposed by Judge James M. Morton, Jr., for conspiracy to ship putrid and decomposed eggs in interstate commerce to Providence.

Nathan Bovornick, president of the company was fined $600.

'WIFE' NO. 2 AND HUSBAND SHE THRASHED IN JAIL

VOWS TO MAKE HIM SUFFER

Margaret G. Murphy of East Boston and Clyde L. Fox, the Springfield stock salesman, whom she charges has two other "wives," she thrashed him during a visit to Springfield jail where he awaits a bigamy action.

$19,645 VERDICT FOR LOTZ IN WIFE'S DEATH

After having been out for five hours, a jury before Judge Webster Thayer in the Middlesex Superior Civil Court, East Cambridge, returned two verdicts totalling $19,645.46, in the case of Edward Lotz of Malden against Mrs. Hannah Wiswall, proprietor of a sanitarium at Wellesley.

Lotz, as administrator of the estate of his wife, Mrs. Mary C. Lotz, sued for $50,000, alleging that owing to negligence on the part of the sanitarium, his wife was scalded to death while in a bath tub on November 10, 1919.

Miss Margaret Coumnas, the nurse who had charge of the psychopathic building in which Mrs. Lots and ten other patients were located, was tried for manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. Lots. She was acquitted.

Both attorneys, George Stanley Wadleigh for the plaintiff and William Flaherty for the defendant, sought to find Miss Coumans to testify, but were unable to do so.

The jury returned a verdict of $6,215.46 for the death of Mrs. Lots and also a verdict of $13,430 for the conscious suffering which she endured while in the tub.

FOX TWO "WIVES" OF UNDER SAME ROOF

Springfield, Oct. 29.—After soundly thrashing Clyde L. Fox, in the jail here, Margaret G. Murphy of No. 25 Neptune road, East Boston, who claims she is one of his three alleged wives, has left this city and returned to her home.

Before going she made it plain that she would prosecute her case against Fox vigorously and would not rest until the man she says made a fool of her had suffered.

Miss Murphy, who says she is Mrs. Fox number 3, was accompanied to the jail by the mother of pretty Angelina Gath of this city, who claims to be wife number 2 of Fox. It was with wife number 3 and her mother that Mrs. Fox number 2 stepped while in this city, preparatory to the beating administered to Fox.

The two "wives" claim to have learned that they have another "wife" in the Fox family, namely Nelly G. Keatley of Hollidaysburg, Pa. This "wife" is said to have been wedded to Fox in 1916.

THIEVES ABANDON CAR WITH CHARLESTOWN LOOT

A group of bandits operating in a stolen automobile were forced to abandon their car and several hundred dollars worth of suiting and dress goods which they had taken from the tailor shop of Otto H. Wendler of No. 33 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, when Patrolman Rice or Station No. 15 came by just as they were preparing to drive away with their loot. Leaping from their car, which they had not yet started, the men fled, eluding the officer and escaping. Rice drove the machine to police headquarters, where the cloth was held for Wendler. The car was taken from its owner, James A. Riley of No. 11 Morton street, Somerville, earlier in the evening from in front of St. Benedict's Church, Somerville.

MORGAN MEMORIAL FUND NOW $39,927

Governor Cox and the Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park street church, praised the work of the Morgan Memorial at the daily rally of the 400 workers who are conducting the campaign in Greater Boston for an emergency fund of $97,000 to prevent the closing of the institution.

The total amount reported by about 100 workers at noon today was $9,875, bringing the total of the fund to date to $39,927.

TO WHIP IRISH WOULD COST BILLION

Premier Told by Military Experts Blockhouse Campaign Would Be Necessary

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 29.—British military experts have advised Premier Lloyd George that it would cost Britain $1,000,000,000 to conduct a successful war in Ireland and would require two years time for the military experts as to the cost of suppressing Ireland in the event the peace conference broke down and the armistice was repealed.

The premier is expected to use this information on Monday in replying to his Tory critics in the House of Commons. It would be necessary for 100,000 military forces to undertake a "blockhouse" campaign against the Irish Republican forces, if war were renewed in Ireland, the premier's informants pointed out.

The premier is preparing his speech at Chequers. He will deliver it in Commons just before the House votes on the resolution of censure introduced by the Unionist members

LIES PASSED AT ESSEX COUNTY HEARING

Charges and Counter-Charges Freely Made at Probe of Middleton Hospital

Stormy scenes of scathing charges and counter-charges featured by an altercation between two men that threatened to end in violence, marked the hearing held in Ames Memorial Hall, Salem, by the special committee investigating the Essex County institutions.

Ralph S. Bauer, president of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce, charged Commissioner Sullivan of county commissioners, John M. Grosvenor, and characterized the new million-dollar tuberculosis hospital which is under erection at Middleton as "the most monumental piece of governmental extravagance I have ever seen."

At one point, when he asserted that Commissioner Grosvenor is prejudiced against Director Smith of the School Board because, he said, the latter "tried to make Grosvenor pay for the supplies he received from the county agricultural school," Grosvenor leaped to his feet, shouting "That's a lie!"

Bauer continued, ignoring the interruption.

Bauer intimated that many county officials are helping themselves to the produce of the school. Other speakers said that the cost of maintaining the school is too great for the results obtained.

Several speakers enlarged on alleged extravagance in connection with the Middleton Hospital. It was charged that a third of the patients in the institution come from points outside of Essex County, and that the burden of maintaining the hospital was left on the cities and towns least able to afford it.

FIVE INDICTED FOR ATTACK ON PASTOR

Wiscasset, Me., Oct. 29.—Five members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the South Bristol Union Church have been indicted by the Lincoln County Grand Jury on a charge of assault and battery upon the pastor, Rev. William Henry Jackson.

Those indicted are N. W. Gamage, Lucinda Gamage, Emma Gamage, Annette Gamage and John A. Turner. The alleged assault and battery took place when a crowd of men and women members of the church pounced upon the pastor after he had barred the Christian Endeavor Society from holding meetings in the church. The pastor said he objected to the methods used in supervising the society's affairs.

BOY SWALLOWS CENT, X-RAY LOCATES IT

Marlboro, Oct. 29.—Wesley Lux, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Lux, went to the hospital here after he had tried the experiment of making a bank of himself, and in order that the disappearance of a penny might be solved, the X-ray was turned on the little fellow. It showed that the penny was not lost, so it was lodged in his intestines. It had previously become stuck in his throat, but the boy swallowed it when efforts were made to dislodge it.

MISS ROBERTSON GUEST OF WELLESLEY LEAGUE

Miss Alice M. Robertson, only woman member of Congress, was the guest of honor at a reception and tea under the auspices of the Wellesley Constitutional League at the home of Mrs. George A. Sweetser, No. 18 Forest street, Wellesley, today. The Congresswoman is to be the guest over the week-end of Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, who gave a luncheon for her at the Hotel Touraine today, after which both ladies and their guests motored to Wellesley.

LEGION PARLEY DELEGATES ON WAY WEST

New England Contingent Plans to Arrive in Kansas City Monday Morning

By CHARLES O. POWERS.

Leaving the North Station at 8 o'clock Friday night, the big Massachusetts party to the third annual national convention of the American Legion, augmented by delegates from Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine, picked up along the route, arrived in Montreal this morning.

The 150 delegates in this contingent comprise the principal New England delegation to the convention, which will be held in Kansas City, Mo., on October 31 and November 1 and 2. Most of the delegates to the first national convention of the Women's Auxiliary, to be held in the same city on November 1 and 2, are aboard the special train.

Breakfast will be had in Chicago tomorrow morning and the rest of the day will be given over to sightseeing. Special automobiles will be provided for a comprehensive trip around the city, including the Lake Shore drive, Michigan boulevard, the loop district and a visit to the famous stock yards.

ARRIVE MONDAY MORNING.

The special will leave Chicago early tomorrow night and is due to arrive in the convention city about 7 o'clock Monday morning, which will give just about time enough to look up the assigned hotel accommodations, have breakfast and be on hand for the opening of the first session of the convention at 9 o'clock.

State Adjutant Leo A. Spillane will be in charge of this delegation going to and returning from the convention. Special Pullman sleeping cars the party will start for home on November 3 about midnight, arriving in Chicago the next afternoon at 4 o'clock and having until 9 o'clock for more sight-seeing in the Windy City.

From 8 in the morning till 2 in the afternoon of Friday, November 4 the party will have opportunities to learn a lot of things about Detroit.

A special tour of inspection of the Ford automobile plant has been arranged. Detroit is proud of her rapid industrial growth and the development of a magnificent park system, and automobiles will be at the beck and call of the New England party for who desire to see the points of interest.

STOP IN MONTREAL.

Montreal is scheduled to be reached on the homeward bound trip at 7:30 in the morning of Saturday, November 4. The delegates are looking forward to a short stop in Montreal on that day. They will stay there until 10 o'clock Sunday morning. While there they will be guests of the city's hotel and a fine program has been planned for their entertainment.

In the morning the party will make a trip around the city and to Mt. Royal. The afternoon will be largely will be spent in individual sightseeing and in trips to places of interest will members of the party have expressed a treat.

Many intend to see the famous churches of the city, St. James Cathedral, patterned after St. Peters at Rome, and the beautiful Notre Dame Cathedral. Others intend to visit other popular places patterned after some of the resort of refreshment which flourished in this country years ago.

The last day of the trip, Sunday, November 6, the party will have a daylight trip through the States of Vermont and New Hampshire, bordering the White and Green Mountains, arriving in Boston at 10 o'clock at night.

TAKE DIRECT ROUTE.

Another party of Legionaires leaves the South Station at 1 o'clock taking a direct route to Kansas City and returning by way of Niagara Falls. This is scheduled to arrive back in Boston at 8 o'clock in the morning of Saturday, November 5. There will be a large party in this party, consisting largely of Norfolk County delegates. The trip has been arranged by the Legion Post Commander Martin Hamilton of that post will be in command.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon another Legion party of about forty-five takes its departure from the South Station by direct route to Kansas City, but will have time for an automobile trip around Chicago Sunday afternoon.

It will have from 8 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon in Detroit on November 4 to see the sights and is due back in Boston at noon on Saturday, November 5.

The Massachusetts delegates will take part in the fight for a strong resolution urging Congress to give favorable consideration to the adjusted compensation or bonus bill.

WOMEN SEEK CHANGE.

The women delegates from Massachusetts do not like the name of their organization and are going to urge that it be changed.

Somehow or other, say the Massachusetts women, the term "Auxiliary" does not exactly define the real relationship of their organization to the Legion, which is composed of their brothers, husbands, fathers and sons.

Joseph J. Hefferman, of South End post, is authority for the statement that Ray O. Brackett of Marblehead will be put forward by Massachusetts delegates as a candidate for national vice-commander.

ACCUSED OF USING NET TO SNARE BIRDS

Several charges will be brought against Pasquale Scalaro of No. 23 Margaret street, Boston, when he is arraigned in the District Court at Concord this morning, following his arrest in Lincoln by Game Warden Frederick W. Goodwin of East Boston, for violating the game laws. Scalaro was caught while operating a large net for capturing song birds.

MOTOR NEWS AND NOTES

By C. F. Donnocker

TOURISTS MAKE LONG TRIP IN G. M. C. TRUCK

Traveling over the United States in a G. M. C. truck is the latest idea in outdoor recreation for the tired business man—in this case an overworked newspaper man—and according to the experience of the crew of the "Snail" it is a regular sport.

Elwood Lloyd, known as the skipper of the craft, together with his wife and two relatives, started from Memphis, Tenn., to make a year's cruise on this land-going yacht. The chassis is a standard G. M. C. of one ton capacity, with a special body designed to accommodate four persons and the mascots, four beautiful, registered cocker spaniels.

The party camps in the open when it is feasible, but it is possible for all to sleep comfortably inside. There is a gasoline stove and a fireless cooker, which takes care of all the cooking for the crew.

The mileage record so far has averaged ten to twelve miles to the gallon with about one thousand miles to a gallon of oil. This is rather a remarkable record considering that the truck and body weighs, with its load, 6,200 pounds.

The truck is equipped with pneumatic tires, which makes the trip smooth enough as a governor on the motor limits the speed to 25 miles per hour.

The truck will travel through thirty-six States before it completes its trip and will cover probably twenty to thirty thousand miles.

AUTO IS NECESSITY, DORT MANAGER SAYS

"Reports from railroads, iron and steel and textile industries indicating greater activity mean resumption of work in all lines, one of the important of which is transportation," says John D. Mansfield, general sales manager of the Dort Co.

"Transportation as applied to commerce is not restricted to motor trucks, which bear the burden. These highly efficient means of quick haulage must have an auxiliary, and this is what the automobile is in business. It is just as much a necessity as the commercial vehicle, which was made plain when everything was going along at top speed a couple of years ago.

PRODUCT OF MARMON PLANT

The body of the new Marmon Fenway sedan, shown above, was designed by the company's engineers and built in the new body-building plant at the Marmon factory.

DEALERS REPORT BIG ENCLOSED CAR DEMAND

This Fall the attention of the automobile buyer is centered on the enclosed type of vehicle. Dealers generally throughout the country report an increased demand for the sedan and the coupe this season. They point out that the closed car has been growing in favor each year with the buying activity heaviest in the cooler months.

"A few years ago the closed car was looked upon as a luxury to be indulged in only by those who could afford two cars—one for Winter and one for Summer," said Charles B. Voorhis, vice-president and general salesmanager of The Nash Motors Company. "At that time production of enclosed vehicles was limited and the cost of manufacture was relatively higher.

"Since then the enclosed type of motor vehicle has become more widely accepted by the automobile owner as a car well fitted for requirements of all seasons. This has been due, in a large measure I believe, to the development of the art of coach-building. Refinements have been made from year to year in the outward appearance of the closed car and in the matter of comfort.

"In Winter months and in stormy weather the sedan of today offers comfort almost comparable to that of the modern living room; in mild or warm weather there is freedom from dust and protection from rain.

"Nash dealers regardless of their location or the size of their community tell us that the demand for sedans and coupes is increasing far beyond a point deemed possible only a few years ago. In the early Fall season the buying, of course, is heaviest."

Dear Mr. Fixit—Please help me out of my difficulty. Last night my battery tested 1250 and this morning it was 1100. I cranked and cranked but could not start the car. The lights were all right but there was no spark. What is your advice?

F. H. H.

Boston.

You do not mention the make of car. Sometimes the "cut-out" sticks and makes a current which runs down the battery as soon as the engine stops. You have had some trouble equivalent to a short. You may have left your switch on all night or the starter button may have stuck, making a contact. It is evident that there was a current discharging. You had better take the car to a battery service station and have it looked over.

Dear Mr. Fixit—Mr 18 Ford is running fine except for one thing. When I start the motor after standing idle about fifteen minutes, it runs on all four, but when I put it in high it sputters and misses until it has been running about five minutes and then it is O. K. Will you kindly tell me through your column what is the trouble?

J. M. G.

Continue.

Your engine is very lean. It is the most economical, however. And since it runs all right after the motor is heated up I would leave it alone. The Ford cars are timed at the service stations to run this way.

Dear Mr. Fixit—I have had my car for a thousand miles and have not had to put anything in the radiator. What precautions should be taken in storing it for the Winter, that is, should it be drained or not, etc., but would like to know if there is any danger to water on account of cold, should some kind of preparation be put on it, and if so what kind? Thanking you for information will be appreciated. C. W. Cowanton, Vt.

Cover the car over with a cotton cloth and leave it where there is a good, cool place of not. Drain off water and oil. Wash out grease cups with kerosene. Put rubber nut grease cups with kerosene. Put rubber nut on the spark plugs to keep out moisture. Take the tires off and coat the rims with a light paint. Store tires, wrapped up in a warm, cellar. Of course the car should be jacked up. Nothing can be put on the tires to injure them.

Mr. Fixit's letter received too late to answer this week.

MARMON HAS 2 NEW CLOSED BODY TYPES

Two new closed body styles are just putting in their appearance in Marmon distributors' show rooms. These are the new Fenway Sedan and the Suburban.

"Designed by Marmon engineers, built completely in the new body building plant at the Marmon factory—bodies made in the same plant with the chassis, by the same organization, insuring the production of a complete car that will measure up in every particular to the high standards set by the Marmon makers," is the explanation given in some of the literature on these new cars.

These new Marmon models are of the general utility, closed car type. The Sedan is of the seven-passenger variety; the Suburban is practically the same as the Sedan, with the exception that it has a glass partition back of the front seat which may be raised and lowered as desired.

These new bodies are mounted upon the well-known "34" chassis, the only chassis type constructed by the Marmon concern.

"We are convinced of the desirability of the closed type," runs one comment in the bulletin issued to Marmon dealers. "We believe there is a big demand for general utility closed cars, and that they must be used for touring work as well as for city and suburban use.

"We believe we are offering an advanced car at a very reasonable price and that these new bodies will give their users a degree of satisfaction which is unattainable in any other car."

Blow-Out Patch Only Good for Temporary Repair Job

Trying to make a blow-out do the job of a permanent repair is a good way to ruin tires. The tire patch is a first-aid treatment to meet emergencies, but as soon after the blow-out as possible it should be removed and a permanent repair made. Unless this is done the casing will have one weak spot that is constantly growing weaker.

When a tread cut is responsible for the blow-out, Miller tire men say, the result is usually a clean-cut hole. Severe bruises ordinarily produce a ragged hole. Where the fabric is raveled or torn apart, fabric separation is often the cause.

POPULAR SIZED ROYAL CORD ON MARKET

As fully half the automobiles in the country use 30x3½-inch tires, there is much interest for motorists in the announcement by the United States Tire Company that it has placed on the market a Royal Cord tire of this size, it is of the clincher type.

A large proportion of the owners of small cars have purchased them from choice and not because of price considerations.

Thousands of these cars are equipped with every modern device for comfort and convenience. By this class and by the small car owner who wants a tire that will give him most service per dollar without reference to the initial cost, the advent of this new cord tire has been hailed with delight.

"For three years our developing and manufacturing organizations have been working steadily on this problem," says the company's announcement. "Hundreds of tires have been tested and every feature of design tested has been tried and proven.

"The new tire is a Royal Cord in every particular. It is made of the same materials and compounds and it has the standard Royal Cord tread design."

NEW YORK TO HAVE CLOSED CAR EXHIBIT

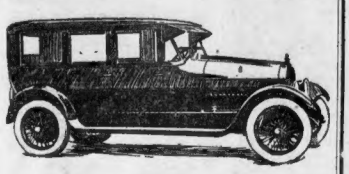
The Automobile Dealers' Association, Inc., of New York will hold a closed body exhibition in the Twelfth Regiment Armory, 62d street and Columbus avenue, from November 14 to 19.

RICKENBACKER ASKED TO DISPLAY NEW CAR

New York, Oct. 28.—The show committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce announced today that the Rickenbacker Motor Company has been invited to participate in the coming New York National Automobile Show.

Officials of the Chamber explained that the action taken was intended as a personal compliment to Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, the American Ace of Aces.

Custom Built Renewed Marmons



The Custom made Marmon 34 appeals to people who wish to reflect their own particular tastes.

The discriminating motorist who has long desired to own a Marmon 34 can now fulfill his ambition. The renewal of these cars is conducted under the plans and supervision of experienced Marmon mechanics, which means the elimination of usage and previous ownership.

Practically speaking, these cars are the same as new Marmons in service and guarantee.

The Marmon 34 Series dates back over six years. Yet so faithfully has Marmon adhered to its policy of stabilized design that the casual observer can tell no difference whatever between the cars of different years.

The entire equipment, mechanism, and design of the Marmon car insure good investment at any time, and years of satisfactory service. We have recent models available. Come in and look these cars over.

We have a good assortment of used cars of other makes.

NASH FOUR

New Low Price

$1045

Breaks All Car Value Records

This final drastic reduction brings the leader of high grade light cars to a popular car price

No such striking contrast between quality and price has ever been known in the motor car industry.

The great Nash Four factory at Milwaukee was built solely and exclusively to produce this car on a quality basis and to make it the unrivalled leader in the light car field.

At its original price of $1395, this great car represented a generous measure of value. Demand has always been far in excess of production.

Now at its present reduced price, $1045, a new standard of value is established, through greatly increased production and a narrow profit margin.

See and Drive This Nash

See this car today and go over it in detail. Observe its big, handsome, roomy, straight-line body; the choice coachwork of its deep Nash blue finish; the depth and luxury of its genuine leather upholstery.

Then consider the Nash Perfected Valve-in-Head Four-Cylinder Motor—the acknowledged performer among four-cylinder power plants. This famous engine, now refined to the utmost degree, gives this car a responsiveness, flexibility and ease of handling that is rare even in cars costing hundreds more.

Now ride in this car and get the full meaning of Nash Four riding comfort on its extremely long, semi-elliptic springs. Take it over the rough spots and observe the ease with which each bump and jolt is absorbed.

In the three outstanding essentials, appearance, performance and riding comfort—

What Happened at Mrs. Vanderbilt-Baker's Merry Dance

"Suddenly seized with one of his prankish moods, the effervescent Mr. Colford had an inspiration. Obviously it was not a divine inspiration, for it caused—well, that's preceding the denouement. But it impelled him to grab Mrs. McVickar by the arm and, 'One, two, three, in you go!' And in she went. It was really a most unpleasant inspiration—for Mrs. McVickar."

Mr. Vanderbilt's Bogus Nobleman

Startling Confessions of "Count Gregory," a Stable Boy and Gentlemanly Jailbird, Who Got Into Fashionable New York Society, Married a Rich Wife and Robbed and Blackmailed the Big Millionaires

BERNARD GRUENEBAUM, a stable boy and a servant in the royal palace of the Emperor of Austria, studied the manners and the habits of the nobles and great ladies of the court and decided to have a career of his own.

As confidential valet of half a dozen dashing and unscrupulous noblemen, the young man shared the secrets of the most profligate and immoral men and women of the Austrian aristocracy.

He attended them at their debaucheries, looked on at their ruinous card games, carried secret messages to the gay wives or unsuspecting husbands, arranged rendezvous and learned a hundred ways by which a bankrupt spendthrift may raise money.

Young Gruenebaum decided to help himself to a bogus title. With all the clever tricks and mannerisms of nobility—even to participation in feminine intrigues and skill in procuring money, why should he not succeed as well as a real nobleman if he chose for his field of adventure a land where his bogus title would not be discovered?

At the age of twenty-two, with a neatly engraved card reading "Baron Gruenebaum," with monocle, boutonniere and a valet, he made his appearance in London. His career at the most fashionable clubs, his meeting and swindling many of the most prominent of English titled nobility, his card games with the Prince of Wales are an astonishing chapter.

In England the "Baron" met many Americans, and their adoration led him to make a trip to the United States to find a rich wife. With letters of introduction from his unsuspecting social acquaintances in London the adventurer found no difficulty in establishing himself in the most sacredly guarded circle of fashionable New York society, and he accomplished the remarkable achievement of becoming the guest of honor at a reception given him by Mrs. William Astor, the acknowledged queen of "the 400."

"I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now?"

Mr. Ainslie's Story of His Nightly Travels Through the New York White Light District Searching the Gay Lobster Palaces for His Pretty Wife and His Fifteen Battles with Her Admirers---and Mrs. Ainslie's Version of It

I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now

The Old Popular Song. By Joseph Howard.

IF you want to feel wretched and lonely and blue,
Just imagine the girl you love best
In the arms of some fellow who's stealing a kiss
From the lips that you once fondly pressed.

I wonder who's kissing her now,
I wonder who's teaching her how;
I wonder who's looking into her eyes,
Breathing sighs, telling lies?
I wonder who's buying the wine
For lips that I used to call mine?
I wonder if she ever tells him of me—
I wonder who's kissing her now?

But it required considerable funds to finance his social career among the fashionable American millionaires, and a careless little transaction about a forged check landed the "Baron Gruenebaum" in Blackwell's Island prison for ten months. This unfortunate setback ended his career in New York for the time, and he returned to renew his conquests in London. To disentangle his name from the penitentiary record the "Baron Gruenebaum" now promoted himself to a higher title and changed his visiting card to read "Count Gregory."

The details of the magnificent "Count Gregory's" exploits in London and in Paris are startling, but it is the story of the impostor's latest visit to America that is the most extraordinary. For, in spite of his earlier splurge in New York, when Mrs. Astor, the social dictator, accepted him as "Baron Gruenebaum" and his sudden eclipse behind the prison walls of New York's famous penitentiary—in spite of all this, the audacious adventurer came back to America and managed to get into the very cream of select society as "Count Gregory."

This time the Vanderbilts were his closest friends, and there is scarcely a prominent man or woman listed in the Social Register whom the "Count" has not met or swindled. In fact, so well did this engaging jailbird succeed that he was welcomed in New York's most exclusive clubs, he was a central figure at the fashionable Madison Square Garden Horse Show, he entered his own string of horses at the Newport Horse Show, competing with the Vanderbilts and other multi-millionaire sportsmen, and won fourteen prizes in one exhibition.

Indeed, so thoroughly well did this bogus aristocrat play his part that he was persuaded to act as one of the Horse Show judges, and the American fashionables joyously accepted blue ribbons at his hands, or with deferential humility bowed to his rulings against their pets in the ring.

Among other achievements the "Count" took on a rich American wife. The wedding which made a "Countess" of this enraptured bride was one of the social events of the season in New York, and is described with intimate details of the ridiculous courtship by the "Count" himself.

There is a humorous side to this, of course—this blind, unquestioning adoration of the palace servant and stable boy because he aped the manners of the nobility and adorned himself with a bogus title. But another phase of the adventurer's activities is more sinister. His wicked scheme to lure an exceptionally pretty young wife to a wanton career, so that the "Count" might play his rich friends into her arms to be plucked for his own financial benefit, and her ruin and suicide. This is the blackest chapter of his career, as told with entire frankness by "Count Gregory" himself.

NEW BOOK TEST STARTS A WEEK FROM MONDAY

$5,000 to Be Divided Among Lucky Winners, With 219 Awards

One week from the coming Monday the Boston American again will delight the hearts of thousands of readers by a picture-title test.

This time the "Book Title Test."

A $5,000 affair, with 219 awards!

Consider the awards: $1,000, $750, $500, $400, $300, $200, $150, $100, $50! Scores more of lesser amounts.

SIMILAR TO OTHERS.

If you took part in the Movie Play Title Test, and the Songs of the World Title Test, all you need to know is that the Book Title Test will be conducted along similar lines.

Daily, for sixty days, the Boston American will print a contest picture drawn to illustrate the title of a well known book. Contestants will be required to name the Correct Title. Those who are most successful will divide the $5,000. That reader who leads all others will take down $1,000.

The correct title, needless to say, will NOT be printed on the picture. That would be too easy. But it WILL be printed every day—among others—in a List of Titles published on the same page as the Test Picture. It will not be too difficult to find. When you have found it you will write it on the line and hold the pictures until the end of the contest.

TELL YOUR FRIENDS.

One of the reasons for conducting contests is to introduce the newspaper to new readers. Do your part by speaking of the Boston American to your friends. Do not stop with the opportunity to share in the distribution of $5,000, but tell your friends why YOU are attracted to the Boston American, what you get here that you have been unable to find in any other newspaper.

The $5,000 Book Title Test begins in the Boston American on Monday, November 7.

MRS. OBENCHAIN IN LOVE ROW WITH ARTHUR BURCH

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 29.—Threats and protestations of love made in a jail corridor led to a break between a man and a woman, both accused of murder. Madalynne C. Obenchain, the woman, is so incensed by what Arthur C. Burch said to her that she will refuse to be a witness at his trial until she is summoned by attorneys, she asserted. She declares Burch said: "I love you, Madelynne. But let me tell you that before I will lose you to Ralph Obenchain I will take you to San Quentin with me."

TWO FAMILIES CLAIM SLAIN GIRL'S TORSO

By Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—Detectives today were trying to determine which of two young runaway wives it was—if either—whose dismembered body was found a week ago in a pond at Long Island City.

This dilemma was brought about by claims of two sets of relatives, one of which firmly declared the mutilated body was that of Mrs. Mary Agnes Wagstaff, while the other, with equal firmness, maintains it was that of Mrs. Dolly Bailey Higgins.

The story leading up to the young woman's death was the same in either case. Mrs Higgins and Mrs. Wagstaff both had quit their husbands. Both had been reported later in the company of another man.

Arnold A. Wagstaff, husband of one of the missing wives, identified the body as that of his wife. The police are inclined to accept this identification.

Mrs. Anna Bailey, mother of the missing Mrs. Higgins, continues to insist, however, that the body is that of her daughter, although Thomas Higgins, husband of Mrs. Higgins, said the body was not that of his wife.

VILLA ON THE STAGE AT PLYMOUTH

Playwright Depicts Mexican Bandits as a Humorous Murderer

We Americans are a curious people quite apart from our notions about rum. We bear no malice, nurse no hatreds and laugh at those who despitefully use us.

A few years ago a contemptible half-breed Mexican bandit named Villa invaded the United States, attacked Columbus, New Mexico, and killed a lot of people. We got furious, marshalled an army, put John Pershing at the head of it, and sent it into Mexico to capture Villa. After some weeks the army marched out an' we promoted Pershing to command our army in Europe as a reward for not getting the scoundrel he was sent after.

And a playwright named Porter Emerson Brown had the nerve to take this bandit and make him a sort of a hero in a play, a humorous murderer, called it "The Bad Man," admitted it was suggested by Villa, and the thing made a sensational hit. Holbrook Blinn as the bandit in "The Bad Man," has had the success of his career, and he comes here in the part next week. I'll go with the rest and enjoy myself laughing at the humorous murderer.

Meanwhile those folks at Columbus, Mexico, are still dead and Pershing is not working, and Villa is unhung. We are a great people.

Picked a Good Name.

When Willie and Eugene Howard selected an English name for use in the show business they selected a good one. The family of Howard has always been a great one in English history. It is the family name of the Dukes of Norfolk, the greatest nobles in England not of the blood royal. During the days of Queen Elizabeth the Howards were the admirals of the fleet which defeated the Armada from Spain. The Howard family has always been Roman Catholic, and their ability to hold their high rank in a very Protestant country through all the centuries despite their religion is another of their distinctions.

In connection with religion it may be said that the Howard brothers are Hebrews. Their connection with the name of Howard did not begin at the baptismal font, but in the office of a vaudeville agent who could not pronounce their original offering which sounded like a cat fight. They certainly have made the name Howard famous in Winter Garden circles and it is with the "Passing Show" that they come to Boston next week.

Once when the Howard brothers couldn't get bookings and were down to the last penny Willie took a job as water boy at Proctor's 125th street Theatre. He joined in the chorus of one of the songs sung on the stage and made such a hit that he and Gene got a job right away. Gene was put on the stage while Willie still distributed water and sang as he did it.

Public Like the Old Ones.

The Boston Society of Singers has had a demonstration of a curious fact which all opera companies learn sooner or later, that so far as the public is concerned there are only ten or twelve operas worth seeing and an opera that isn't half a century old doesn't draw.

Critics are always demanding that opera companies freshen up their repertoires, and when opera companies respond they play to small houses. "Faust" at the Arlington Theatre did a fine business. "Manon" flopped. "Trovatore" is drawing fairly again. "Manon" is not an operatic success in the real sense, since it is a quarter of a century old and one of the most beautiful of the French repertory. But so far as the man in the street is concerned he wants to hear "Faust." "Carmen," "Trovatore" "Lucia," "Aida," "Rigoletto" and a few other old-timers and when he has heard them he prefers to hear them over again than to attend new ones.

The Bach brothers are not yielding to this prejudice completely for they propose to produce in the near next week, a dainty little operetta almost a comic opera by Delibes, composer of the ballet "Coppelia" I understand they have "Lohengrin" in preparation.

Gallo's Repertory.

Sig. Fortune Gallo believes in giving the public what they want. If you will read his repertory for the first week you will find no uncertain or unfamiliar work on its repertory. The old stuff, sung in Italian, "Carmen," "Boheme," "Faust," "Rigoletto," "Forza del Destino," "Aida," "Madame Butterfly" and "Trovatore." "Forza del Destino" is the only one which hasn't figured in the repertory of every opera company which ever came here and Verdi wrote it and all the Italians know all the tunes so let it go as a regular like the rest.

If you glance at the Chicago Opera repertory you will find it full of Nonna Vanna's "L'Amore de Tre Re," "Aphrodite," "Pelleas and Melisande," "Snow Maiden," and similar works. The public doesn't consider those things as opera at all, and it stays away with great heartiness, and that is why Miss Garden's opera company is very near the rocks.

"Give them the old operas," says Gallo, "and when you've run through them once do them all over again."

Betty Compson, Paramount star and featured player in George Loane Tucker's production, "Ladies Must Live," which will be shown at the Park Theatre this week, tells an interesting story of how she met Mr. Tucker and developed into a screen star. Mr. Tucker was looking for a woman to play the part of Rose in "The Miracle Man," and having seen her photograph at a screen agency he sent for her. She responded, and after looking her over told her he would communicate with her later.

"When I reached home there was a telephone call from Mr. Tucker," said Miss Compson. "He said: 'I am going to give you the most wonderful Christmas present you ever had in your life, the part of Rose in 'The Miracle Man.' And it was surely the most wonderful thing that ever happened to me.

"And after I had appeared in 'The Miracle Man' Mr. Tucker retained me for his 'Ladies Must Live.' Do you want to know a secret? It is that I think I do much better work in 'Ladies Must Live' than I have done in any other picture I have ever appeared in."

NEW PASSING SHOW AT SHUBERT

The Shuberts will present the new Winter Garden revue, "The Passing Show of 1921," for the first time in Boston, at the Shubert Theatre, on Monday night, with Willie and Eugene Howard as the stars. It is promised that this new Winter Garden revue, despite the high cost of production, is to be the most gorgeous in point of scenery and costumes in any Winter Garden show produced to date. It is not necessary, however, to have seen the original to enjoy the fun. The new "Passing Show" will be in two acts and the twenty-six scenes. It will mark the ninth "Passing Show" produced at the Winter Garden, the first lyrics are by Harold Atteridge and the music by Jean Schwartz, with incidental music by Al Goodman and Lew Pollock. The new show has been staged by J. C. Huffman, the entire production under the personal direction of J. J. Shubert. The Messrs. Shubert have brought together for this new show the most astonishing collection of artists that have yet appeared in Winter Garden productions. Heading the list are Willie and Eugene Howard.

The supporting cast provided for this colossal revue comprises a very unusual collection of singers, dancers and comedians. Included among them are the teams of O'Hanlon and Zambilni, Mellette Sisters, Grace and Bertice, and Schrode and Aronson; the feminine portion being May Boley, Emily Miles, Ina Hayward, Dolly Hackett, Elsa May, Peggy Mortimer, Tiny Collins and Flo Somerville; the men being Will Philbrick, Cleveland Bronner, John Quinlan, Irving O'Hay, Dave White, W. H. Pringle, Jack E. Rice.

Shubert Resources

It looks as though the Shubert vaudeville enterprise was firmly established. After a month at the Majestic Theatre audiences are larger than ever and the bills steadily improving. This is the more remarkable as Shubert vaudeville was started at a time when the show business and all other business forms were at a standstill. Had a great manufacturing or distributing corporation announced the opening of an extensive chain of branches, employing many people, the circumstances would have been seized upon as a propitious indication of a revival of confidence on its part that normal conditions would soon be reached.

There were few who would predict that a great circuit of vaudeville houses could be created over night offering respectable opposition to the firmly established institutions, and it speaks volumes for the powers of organization which accomplished this miracle.

An even more recent example of the efficiency of that organization was given by the calamity which happened to the "Passing Show" in Canada last week. Two baggage cars containing nearly all the costumes and most of the scenery were burned on the way into Montreal. Within twenty-four hours a completely new production duplicating the stuff which had been destroyed was on a special train speeding for Montreal, and the show opened on Tuesday night instead of Monday. Any other producer would have had to lay off his show for several weeks as a result of such a calamity.

EXPERT ON PERIODS IN FILM

Through the production of Mary Pickford's new million-dollar picture, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," there developed an absolutely new vocation in the motion picture industry. It's that of a "period expert," held at the Pickford Company by John St. Howells, formerly in the household service of members of the British nobility. Because of his familiarity with English customs and dress, Howells is of great value in an advisory capacity on the stage. His particular duty was to see that the costumes and furnishings were in the period described by Frances Hodgson Burnett in her famous story, and that the players not only looked, but also acted as did members of the households in the ancestral castles of England. Howells had been in the service of the Earl of Dudley, the Marquis of Zetland, the Earl of Minto, the Marquis of Linlithgow, the Duke of Grafton and H. R. H., the Duke of Connaught. "Little Lord Fauntleroy" will be shown for the first time for a brief engagement only at the Selwyn Theatre, beginning Sunday November 6.

Goodby, "Follies."

The astute Mr. Ziegfeld is removing his "Follies" at the end of next week. The "Follies" were the first to raise theatre prices and the first to lower them. To be sure, they didn't lower them much, but any progress downward is being rewarded by weary patronage just now, and standing room only is the sign at most of the performances.

McISAAC says that

ETHEL BARRYMORE, in "Declasse," leaves the Hollis after one of the most successful engagements she ever played in Boston at the end of next week. It has been a continual sell-out.

ZIEGFELD'S FOLLIES close their brief season in Boston at the end of next week. It has been a continual sell-out. Colonial.

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK" remains but one week more at the Tremont. A pleasant little play which caught on remarkably.

"THE ROSE GIRL," at the Wilbur, with Fred Hillebrand and Louis Simon, continues to draw well. It has been the only regular musical comedy in town.

THE BIG FILMS

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS in "The Three Musketeers," winds up a wonderful engagement at the end of next week. Mary Pickford (Mrs. Fairbanks) succeeds him with with "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

"OVER THE HILL" continues to draw at Tremont Temple, despite its long sojourn in Boston.

"WAY DOWN EAST," at the Globe, is entering the last week of its second long run in Boston.

MARY PICKFORD. BOSTON THEATRE.

It will be welcome news to the great army of movie lovers to know that Mary Pickford's newest screen production "Little Lord Fauntleroy" adapted from Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous story, will begin a limited engagement at the Selwyn Theatre, on Sunday matinee, November 6. "Little Lord Fauntleroy" is undoubtedly one of the most appealing stories ever screened. It is rich in color and human interest and Miss Pickford, who plays the character of Lord Fauntleroy, in all boy, despite the curls, the spotless color, and handsome velvet suits, "Little Lord Fauntleroy" succeeds "The Three Musketeers," the latter concluding its successful engagement on Saturday November 5.

MARY ROSE.

Pr vided by reports most enthusiastic in their acclaim and praise, Ruth Chatterton is to be seen here at the Hollis Street Theatre Monday evening, November 7, in "Mary Rose," the newest play from Sir James M. Barrie, in which she appeared at the Empire Theatre, New York, last season. In the role she is said to have abundant opportunity to display all those pleasing qualities displayed and recalled in "Daddy Long Legs," "Come Out of the Kitchen," "The Rainbow" and "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" The combination of Barrie and Ruth Chatterton would seem to be a most happy one.

"THE LOVE LETTER."

An unusual event of unusual interest for Boston theatregoers will be the engagement beginning Monday, November 7, at the Tremont Theatre, of John Charles Thomas, America's foremost baritone in Charles Dillingham's Jacobi-Le Baron operetta, "The Love Letter," which comes direct from its successful New York engagement at the Globe Theatre.

CHAPLIN IN FILM AT ORPHEUM

Charlie Chaplin, the peer of all screen comedians and the most notable character of the country, will appear in his latest production, "The Idle Class," as the headline feature of another attractive bill arranged for the coming week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. It is said that in "The Idle Class" Chaplin offers an interpretation unlike any that he has hitherto appeared in, and the production is liberally punctuated with laugh-provoking situations. In addition to Chaplin a feature photoplay of multiple reels entitled "High Hearts," with Gladys Walton as the leading performer, will also be shown, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The vaudeville will be topped by Arthur Deagon, the popular musical comedian star, who will offer a humorous repertoire.

"TWO LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE."

A. L. Erlanger's musical comedy production, "Two Little Girls in Blue," comes to the Colonial for a short return engagement beginning Monday, November 7. The experience of this attraction during its very brief stay when it was presented for the first time on the stage in this city last Spring is fresh in the minds of local theatregoers. The success it instantly met with was most flattering and little short of sensational. The three weeks of its Boston engagement were only preparatory to its New York engagement, where throughout the Summer it ran in the metropolis universally hailed as a hit of first rank.

JIM BARTON TOPS BILL AT MAJESTIC

Following the two big Sunday concerts tomorrow afternoon and evening, there will be a complete change of bill beginning next Monday afternoon and evening, headed by James Barton & Company. Barton's name is now a by-word as a comedian. He has returned to vaudeville after his sensational success in musical comedy. Barton is a travesty artist of the first water, and his comic scene in a restaurant is one that is impossible to describe in type. Another recruit from musical comedy, although now well established as a vaudeville headliner favorite, will be Cecil Cunningham, the distinctive comedienne, with a new series of songs and chatter. From the grand opera field comes Cleofini, late leading tenor of the principal grand opera companies of this country and Europe. Nonne Dickinson and Gracie Deagon, late comedy features of the "Hello, Alexander" company and the New York Winter Garden will indulge in song, dance and talk under the title of "This and That."

Brenck's Golden Horse and its shapely bronze rider will be seen in those lovely poses which are always the admiration of the lover of equine beauty. The Pedersen Brothers, comedy aerial artists, will be seen at the flying rings, introducing the "famous Pedersen trick." Joe Beganny and his comedians, who have not appeared in the United States since 1915, will be back again, especially imported for Shubert vaudeville, and they have a new act, "The Billposters," to replace their time-honored "Lunatic Bakers." There are ten men in the company and each is a comedian and acrobat.

THE BAD MAN COMES TO PLYMOUTH

Holbrook Blinn Starring In Satirical Comedy Which Made Hit in New York

Monday night William Harris, Jr., will present Holbrook Blinn at the Plymouth Theatre in "The Bad Man," the satirical comedy by Porter Emerson Browne New Yorkers took to their hearts and loved for an entire season.

In "The Bad Man" Holbrook Blinn is considered to have found the best play he has had in the half-hundred his name has been connected with. Critics and public have spoken of his colorful, romantic "Pancho Lopez" in superlative praise; he has been regarded as one of the best, most intelligent and most dominant actors of the American stage in this generation. His "terror of the borderland" is a lovable figure not to be forgotten. He is a "killer," a stealer of women, and highly pleased with himself for every commandment of society broken, but he speaks so much wisdom picturesquely and humorously that he has helped make "The Bad Man" a play for thinkers as well as for lovers of excitement.

The cast in support of Mr. Blinn is praised as being of the same unusual excellence as William Harris, Jr., gave either of his notable stars in "Abraham Lincoln" and "Seat Is West," for instance. It includes Fred L. Tilden, Thomas Shearer, Leah Peck, Miriam Collins, Sidney Mason, John Harrington, Wilson Reynolds, Herbert Heywood, Paul Villas, Marinos Byron, James B. Linhart, Frank Bixby and Charles Sellen.

Woke Up on the Stage.

"The most awful moment of my life," says Louis Simon, one of the comedians of "The Rose Girl," "occurred when I woke up in bed and found myself on the stage at Keith's with an expectant audience looking at me."

"How could that happen?" demanded Robert Hunter, press agent, pen in hand.

"I had an act in which I played an apothecary named Pumpernickel, and I was discovered when the curtain went up apparently asleep in bed in a funny nightcap and gown. The act in front of mine worked in one, which means in front of a drop close to the footlights. The stage was set behind that drop for my scene. I got accustomed to climbing into the bed and waiting for my turn. It was rather a wearisome act for me ahead of me, and one night I fell asleep.

"My turn came and the curtain went up. I slept soundly. The audience waited patiently for me to wake up. A bell ringing violently was supposed to awaken me, but this time I never heard it. There was a bad stage wait. The stage manager rang the bell half a dozen times before it made any impression on me. Then I sat up with a start. My emotions as it dawned on me that I was on a stage instead of home at the hotel can be imagined. I grasped wildly at my linen and don't think of them. My night was considered good acting by the folks out front, and I laughed uproariously as I blinked at them, and this time it was the real thing. I got up right, but I never got into that bed again until just a few seconds before the curtain went up."

How Do You Get Declasse?

Just what do you have to do to get "Declasse"?

We are sorry for Ethel Barrymore when people snub her and chatter behind her back and draw their skirts to one side, all in Zoe Akins' play, "Declasse," which comes to the Hollis Thursday afternoon. But what the deuce did she do? So far as the story goes she was just a little bit careless. She hadn't deceived her husband very much—according to the rules of the piece. She wasn't a flapper at the time, but was what demi-monde person, because she had that side of New York millionaire with the heavy English accent and the manners of Wall Street makes and the unusual but improper proposal at which any half-world woman would have simply given him down politely but efficiently.

What I am trying to discover is why it was necessary for her to step in front of a taxi-cab instead of merely into one side, all in Zoe Akins' play. But what the deuce did she do? So far as the story goes she was just a little bit careless. She hadn't deceived her husband very much—according to the rules of the piece. She wasn't a flapper at the time, but was what demi-monde person, because she had that side of New York millionaire with the heavy English accent and the manners of Wall Street makes and the unusual but improper proposal at which any half-world woman would have simply given him down politely but efficiently.

What I am trying to discover is why it was necessary for her to step in front of a taxi-cab instead of merely into one side, all in Zoe Akins' play. If there was any guilty secret in her life the audience was not told about it. Miss Akins, the authoress, could easily have suppressed the young Social Register who turned up in time to hold her hand as she died delicately and without bloodshed.

However "Declasse" is a successful play, and if Ethel Barrymore runs over, it man that she is getting run over, it might not have succeeded so well.

It Must Be Personality

The success of Genevieve Tobin in "Little Old New York" is an interesting example of the mental attitude of audiences. Miss Tobin is as feminine a person as it is possible to imagine. Dressing her in boy's clothes doesn't conceal her sex in the slightest degree. There never was a boy like her from the beginning of time. That anybody on the stage could be deceived for a second is a test of the credulity of an audience, which is much too great. There are certain sorts of play in which such a deviation from the plausible would be preposterous. No audience would accept it. But the costumes, the air of lavender and old lace, the verisimilitude of "Little Old New York," put an audience into a mood of toleration. There is no denying that Miss Tobin is cunning and sweet in her boy's dress, and the story requires that she fall in love with her without his understanding that it is the love of a man for a woman, which wouldn't be plausible if she were a masculine boy. So there you are.

Regarding Miss Tobin's Irish accent, I don't know. There are many kinds of brogues in Ireland, but I never heard any quite like hers. There may be some village where her little sing song is the way of talking, or she may have invented it. But it's pleasant.

ARNOLD DALY IS KEITH HEADLINER

Arnold Daly and William Norris, stars of the dramatic stage, whose artistry is so well known it would be an insult to a theatregoer's intelligence to use descriptive adjectives, will be the headliners at B F Keith's Theatre next week. Supported by Walter F. Scott, Andrew Benoit, and Caesar Dorriniques, they will be seen in "The Van Dyck," a comedy adapted from the French by Cosmo Gordon Lenox.

My dear Friends:--

The manner in which you have received me and the play which brought me to you, "LITTLE OLD NEW YORK", has been delightfully gratifying. I, who came to you a stranger, am happier than I can say at your nice treatment of me. We can stay with you only the coming six days at the TREMONT THEATRE and I heartily wish we could remain much longer. For my associate players in "LITTLE OLD NEW YORK", and myself, please accept a real hearty--"WE THANK YOU."

Very sincerely yours,

BOSTON OFFERS SOLID TID BITS TO THE STAGE CONNOISSEUR

A NOTE FROM THE THRUSH! Clara Shear, coloratura soprano of the Boston Society of Singers, who will trill at the Arlington Theatre is rated and popular

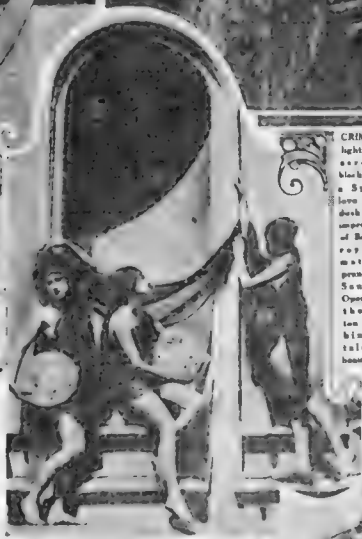
SWADDLING COACH! John Forss at 25, is the youngest gridiron head coach in the U. S. Sways destinies of pigskin chasers at the San Diego (Cal.) High School. Has 200 men under his charge. Haven't lost a game yet. (Int.)

A GENRE PICTURE! A homely and exquisite scene from "Over the Hill," feature photoplaying film at Tremont Temple.

TWO "WIVES" of Arthur J. Sidney of Morristown, N. Y., met. They compared notes—and husband. Result—disaster for hubby. He is held on bigamy charge. First wife (right) suing for divorce. (Int.)

THE SNOW BRIDE! Mrs. C. T. Pedersen, bride of four schooner skipper, who accompanied husband to within 100 miles of North Pole. (I. N.)

SATURDAY NIGHT for Dorothy Maynard (left) and Natalie Natesson, two charmers of "The Rose Girl" at the Wilbur.



CRIMSON lightning across black sky; a Spanish love song at dusk — past impressions of Bonnie Scroys, dramatic soprano of the San Carlo Opera Co., at the Arlington Combines both talent and beauty.

RICH IN GEMS and talent—is Ethel Barrymore now gracing the Hollis as Daisy Thorne. These pearls are genuine and worth a fortune.

M. BEZSSONOFF, French scientist, has found a new method of discovering vitamines, a long step toward the prevention of scurvy. (I. N.)

SPEEDING ROYALTY! Baroness Marion Antonietta Arcoaz is truly the queen of the wheel as the result of her victory in the Brocc International Round Tour at Brocia, Italy. Covered the 432 kilometers in 4 hours. Snapped just after the race. (W. W.)

IN THE COOL OF THE MORNING! This might be a Grecian but it isn't. It's three graceful Marion Morgan dancers posing before the M. H. de Young Museum in San Francisco (U. & U.)

FOR THE EVENING DANCE! This beautiful three-quarter cape of black ospo, handsomely embroidered with white and trimmed with knotted silk fringe, is just the thing for between dances. For that matter, it is suitable for the play or opera. Just imported from Peru and very popular. (U. & U.)

WALKING TO LEARN! Miss Theresa Tromp walked 3,000 miles from her home in Ferndale, Wash., to Columbia University, N. Y., that she might study for doctor's degree in philosophy (Int.)

SCHNOPS, the pug on the left, has a dog gone good punch and he is here demonstrating it on his owner, Joseph Freedenberg, of N. Y. The animal, a great Dane, is the master canine stopper of the world. (Int.)

THESE LADIES wish the fat was in the fire or any other darn place except on themselves, but, to give them credit, they are sticking rigorously—that's a good word—to their program of chasing the fat or die in the attempt. Here is one of Dr. Copeland's assistants instructing a group in an important reducing exercise at Madison Square Garden, N. Y. Many have dropped out, but the majority are loyal and are benefitted by the loss of many pounds. (U. & U.)

LET'S GO, GIRLS! And they did. Nobody is paying an election bet, it's just a novel game played at the naval officers' field day at South Ken, England. The vehicle is two-wheeled and the officer must push his passenger around the course without upsetting her to win. (Int.)

PRESERVING THE PROFESSION'S DIGNITY! Many of our millionaires proudly boast that they were once newsboys, but they little dreamed then that their "profession" would, one day become dignified and lucrative. It has even caught the eye of the investors. This new device provides a safeproof and practical sales stand. Can be easily moved and locked, and sells for $55. William Prinegar, "one of the boys," is pictured beside his store. (U. & U.)

POISON SOUGHT IN SEARLES AUTOPSY

Organs Sent to Harvard Medical Laboratory in Probe of Millionaire's Death

Lawrence, Oct. 29—Following a four-hour autopsy on the body of the late Edward F. Searles, Methuen millionaire, the organs were turned over to Dr. William J. Rose of Harvard Medical school, Hingham, to be examined for traces of poison.

The autopsy was performed by Dr. George Burgess Magrath of Boston, assisted by Dr. George W. Dow, medical examiner of the Lawrence district.

The body of the millionaire, who died nearly 18 months ago, was found to be exceptionally well preserved. The actual process of removing the casket from its resting place, downstairs to the catacomb, occupied about two hours.

Present at the autopsy were Dr. Magrath and his stenographer, Dr. George W. Dow, Dr. Edward A. Hanley, representing the board of Health of Methuen, and Walter and Frank Douglas undertakers, who embalmed Searles' body.

POLICE ON GUARD.

Chief Beaumont, at the beginning of the autopsy, left to direct the police who stood guard about the vast estate.

The autopsy began at 11:20 and ended at 3:30. It was declared to be one of the most thorough ever performed in this section. There was no evidence of poison in the body. The examination of the organs is relied upon to establish the truth or falsity that Edward F. Searles was poisoned. It will be a week or ten days before this is definitely known.

Dr. Victor A. Reed, the Searles' family physician, who attended the millionaire during his last days, and who described his symptoms to District Attorney S. Howard Donnell, was not present. There was no invitation extended Dr. Reed to attend and he did not request to be present. It was expected also that Dr. Henry A. Dearborn would be present but he too was uninvited.

NEWTON LAWYER ON SCENE.

Attorney William Brat of Newton was present when the physicians who conducted the autopsy arrived. He left the tomb soon after.

No attempt will be made to find out the identity of the writer of the mysterious poison letter unless it is found that Searles did not die from natural causes. District-attorney Donnell intimated several days ago that he had a good clue as to who had written the missive.

Many friends of the late millionaire had believed up to the very moment of the autopsy that the order to exhume the body would be countermanded by the district attorney's office.

GIRLS! SKIRTS
DOWN ONE INCH

Fashion decrees that skirts come closer to the ground, but that is no reason why one need buy new clothes. If the hem is faded or soiled when you let it out, get a package of Diamond Dyes and recolor the skirt like new.

Easy directions in each package of Diamond Dyes tell you how to dye or tint any old, faded garment, also your draperies. Just tell druggist whether your material is wool or silk, or whether it is cotton, linen or mixed goods.—Advertisement.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Miss Eugenia Gardiner and Mr. Rudd Married Today

MRS. MORTIMER SEABURY

Mrs. Mortimer Seabury of Weston numbered among the society women who helped to sell at the rummage sale given at Horticultural Hall for the benefit of the Boston School of Occupational Therapy. Mrs. Seabury is "cashiering" at the shoe table.

By BETTY ALDEN.

TODAY'S notable society event is the wedding of Miss Eugenia Gardiner, daughter of Mrs. Edward Gardiner of Mt. Vernon street and N. W. Dwight Rudd of Cambridge, which takes place at noon in Emmanuel Church.

The bride, who is a member of the 1917 Sewing Circle, has chosen Miss Rosanna D. Thorndike as her maid of honor, while the following girls have been selected as bridesmaids: Miss Evelyn and Miss Beatrice Gardiner of New York who are her cousins, Miss Isabel M. Rudd, a sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Walter O. Luscomb, Jr., of Woods Hole.

Edward H. Rudd, Jr., will be his brother's best man and the ushers include James H. Hodges, Jr., J. Pennington Gardiner, Joseph Winlock, Eliot Hubbard, Jr., Walter O. Luscomb, Jr., Wheaton B. Byers, Jonathan T. Lanman and Frederick S. Ritchie of New York.

Due to the family connections of the couple, the wedding is to be a decidedly smart and large affair, and a goodly part of Boston society will be at Emmanuel Church when Eugenia Gardiner will be transformed into Mrs. Dwight Rudd. The bride has a notable contingent of sister-debutantes, among them being Mrs. Alexander Tomes, who before her marriage just one week ago in the same church, was Miss Elizabeth St. John Whiting of Beacon street and Santa Barbara, Cal.; also Suzanne Mandell of Brookline, whose engagement to William B. Gamblin was recently announced; Nancy Ely of Fairfield street, who has but recently returned from abroad, others are the Misses Ruth Paine, Helen Bennett, Harriett and Margot Amory, Rosamond Lamb, Cornelia Fiske, Anita Burgis, Louise Hoar, Faith Blanchwood, Susan Lee and Mary Sigourney.

Mention of Mary Sigourney's name recalls the fact that I encountered this terpsichorean inclined young woman while walking through the Public Gardens yesterday morning with her sister, Edith Sigourney, of tennis fame. One hears that Mary is to take part in the much-talked-of Woman's Day at the Copley-Plaza on November 16—Miss Sigourney's part being, of course, of a terpsichorean nature. Though it is not known for a certainty, as yet, one hears many rumors that Mary, with Elisabeth Caswell, Francesca and Berthe Braggiotti, and Janice Liggett are to charm their audiences on November 16 with some of the dances which made last year's Vincent Club show such an enjoyable event.

A large number of the socially-elect attended the special concert given last night at Symphony Hall by the Harvard Glee Club and Mary Garden under the auspices of the Boston Music School Settlement. Last night's performance marked the first concert of the Glee Club since its return from Europe. The club, by the way, will contribute singers as part of the vaudeville program which will be given at the annual bazaar of the Women's Municipal League in the Copley-Plaza on the afternoon of November 15. At this vaudeville "show," which is to be given under the direction of Mrs. Bernard C. Weld of Marlboro street, several members of the Vincent Club will appear as dancers.

The following prominent people were patronesses for last night's concert at Symphony Hall: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Mrs. Oliver Ames, Jr., Mrs. L. Vernon Briggs, Mrs. S. Parker Bremer, Mrs. R. T. Biles, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Binney, Mr. and Mrs. W. Irving Bullard, Mrs. J. Dellinger Barney, Mrs. Walter C. Bayliss, Mr. Lamont O. Burnham, Mrs. Gorham Brooks, Mrs. Guy Currier, Miss Frances G. Curtis, Mrs. A. Coolidge, Mrs. Robert Emmons, Mrs. Clarence B. Edwards, Mrs. C. C. Ely, Miss Margaret Fish, Mrs. Charles Fiske, Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes, Mrs. Charles R. Fearing, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Flagg, Judge and Mrs. Robert Grant, Mr. and Mrs. William Gaston, Miss Elizabeth G. Houghton, Mrs. W. P. Hallowell, Mrs. Edward J. Holmes, Mr. T. C. Hollander, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Johnson, Mrs. Sturgis Lothrop, Miss Margaret Lang, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Lowell, Mrs. Amory A. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Leland, Mr. and Mrs. John Moir, Mrs. Edward C. Moore, Mrs. J. Franklin McElwain, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine 2d, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parkman, Mr. H. Stapley Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Ratshesky, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rothwell, Dr. Denman W. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Sears, Miss Elonora Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Miss Mary Lee Ware, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Webster, Mrs. G. S. West, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Whiteside, Mr. and Mrs. Fiske Warren.

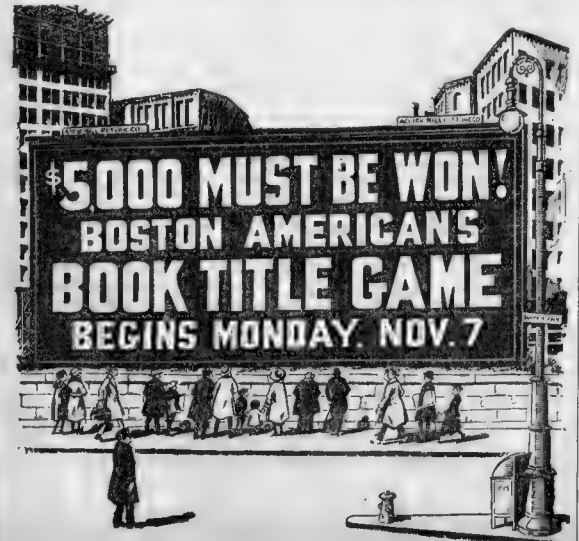
BROCKTON MAN DENIES SPRINGFIELD LARCENY

Springfield, Oct. 29.—Charles G. Field of Allen street, Brockton, was arraigned in district court here today charged with larceny of $500 from Louis Tsioumis, poolroom proprietor. Field pleaded not guilty and the case went to November 10 for trial. He was released in $500 bail.



SEVERAL DROWNED IN FLOOD AT NAPLES

Naples, Oct. 29.—Several persons were drowned and extensive property damage was caused by a flood of the River Sebeto, which flows through this city. The inundation was caused by a severe storm, lasting for twelve hours, and a large portion of the lower sections of Naples was under water for several hours. The storm did serious damage in the suburbs of this city, houses being destroyed, vineyards and crops washed out and cattle carried away.

Small Fortune to Winner in Book Title Test

Five thousand dollars!

In 2,0[illegible] awards

For Correct Titles

One week from the coming Monday the Boston American will inaugurate the third of its picture games, this time a "Book Title Test."

Sixty pictures will be printed, one every day throughout a sixty-[illegible] Sundays not included.

Each picture will represent the title of a well-known book. The title will not be printed on the picture, but WILL appear among other book titles in a List of Titles printed on the same page.

Find and write the Correct Title. That will be the "game," and those who are most successful at it will divide the Five Thousand Dollars. A small fortune, $1,000 to the reader who sends in the largest number of correct titles! Many other generous awards.

The Boston American's only interest and great care will be to see that only those get them who earn them.

Naturally, there will be a rush for the paper on the opening day of the new contest. Everybody will want to share in the awards. Money is scarce and hard to get. Hard to hold onto after one has it. The contest will go like hot cakes.

Let the newsdealer know today that you are going to be a contestant and must be assured of the Boston American daily throughout the contest. Take nothing for granted or you may be greatly disappointed by the "all sold out" report.

Mind the day and date: Monday, November 7.

CHURCHES ASKED TO AID MORGAN MEMORIAL

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes of the Methodist Church, the Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad of the Park street Congregational Church, the Rev. Edward T. Root of the Trinity Episcopal Church of Newton Centre, the Rev. Dr. John H. Bell of the Second Universalist Church, the Rev. Dr. Thomas Van Ness of the Second Unitarian Church, the Rev. J. A. McClelland of the Fourth Presbyterian Church and the Rev. Dr. George E. Hoar, president of the Newton Theological school, sent out today a joint appeal to all the Protestant Churches of Greater Boston to aid the Morgan Memorial of Boston in its campaign to raise $97,000 to prevent serious curtailment of its work.

The ministers were urged to ask their congregations to contribute to the fund and were requested to have special offerings taken in behalf of the Morgan Memorial.

Yesterday's reports brought the total of $40,000. There was no workers' rally today, but Monday at Ford Hall all the 2,[illegible] teams are expected to [illegible] final reports.

SUES BRICKLEY FOR RENT OF APARTMENT

Details of the manner in which Charles E. Brickley, famous Harvard football star of a few years ago leased a $2,500 apartment on Riverside Drive, New York, are contained in a suit filed against him in the New York Supreme Court in which the owners of an apartment house on the drive seek to collect $9,783 alleged unpaid rent.

Brickley entered the brokerage business in New York upon receiving his diploma from Harvard. His marriage to the daughter of a wealthy New York financier is said to have been partly responsible for his ability to pay for the expensive apartment.

Recently Brickley, in addition to his brokerage business, has been coaching the Fordham football team. The [illegible] firm for which he worked is said to have been deeply involved in financial difficulties of late.

KILLS SELF AT SISTER'S HOME IN LYNN

Ill Health Drives Gorge Bruce, 52, to Suicide by Shooting

George Bruce, fifty-two years old, committed suicide today by shooting himself through the head in his room in the home of his sister, Mrs. Gourras, at No. 21 Fenton avenue, Lynn.

It is believed despondency over continued ill health drove him to self-destruction. He had lived most of his life in New York and went to live with his sister two months ago.

HARVARD OFFERS SECOND STRING PLAYERS AGAINST CENTRE

With several convalescing players not due to reach their normal physical condition until next week, in time for the Princeton game, Harvard is offering in the Stadium this afternoon a team composed, practically, of second string players against Centre College. With the Princeton game in view next Saturday, Coach Fisher will send his best players to the Stadium dugout, where he hopes to keep them the entire game as spectators.

To the announced lineup are only two men likely to be considered in the starting lineup against Princeton. Two more may convince the coaches that they are ready for varsity places. But the major portion of Harvard's football strength will be under blankets on the side lines

* * *

Fiske Brown, at right guard, and Vint Chapin, at halfback, are considered among the best in Harvard ranks. Clark Macomber, at right end, and Frank Roullard, at left halfback, may either receive positions or their showing today. Otherwise, the men playing will be understudies against the Tigers. Of course possible injuries to the first choice players.

* * *

Harvard's strength in the dugout includes Captain Kinnie Rouse, Jack Crocker, Tubby Grew, Charlie Snell, George Owen, Isaac Guyer, Charley Varney, Mitchell Gentwick and Karl Pfaffman. With the exception of the last three men, this contest will be able to become real live warriors and jump into the game if any danger signals are hung up from their comrades covering the first line defence.

* * *

Centre's colorful football eleven may try Harvard's stern test for resources. The Crimson hasn't shown a very practical defence against forward passing, and if the praying Colonels, with their fleet-footed Jo McMillin, elusive Terry Snodig, and quick-witted Capt. Armstrong show a consistent handling of the ball the fighting Crimson may be scored on once or twice.

* * *

But Coach Moran is using two very heavy men on the extremities of his rush line, which may foreshadow considerably-off cackle attacks. Roosevelt, last year's fullback, weighs close to 200, and Bill Jamieson is a well constructed tackle. Snoddy, at right half, was an end last Fall. Harvard's inexperienced tackles may find these smashing veterans of three seasons too much to handle

* * *

Frank Kerrwin is Harvard's center, with Brown and Charley Hubbard as guards. Gren is ready if Hubbard falters. Coach Woods, however, prefers that he should rest after an attack of tonsilitis which caused him to lose twenty pounds in a week's time.

* * *

The tackles are Phil Kennard at R. A. Judd both rangy lads and possessed of known fighting qualities. Ivan Jarvis and Buckeye Mcombs are the starting ends

Dewey Johnson will do the quarterbacking unless Fisher has a change of heart. Charlie Bond has two fingers wrapped in bandages. Johnson has failed to show kicking ability and has not been able to get so much pep out of the team.

* * *

Vint Chapin, Frank Roullard and Erwin Gehrke are the backs. Chapin is useful in end runs. He is a track man. Roullard is depended largely for defensive work, while Gehrke is counted for line bucks and punting. Winnie Churchill, the stone-running back, is certain to be called upon some time

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 28.—Allen Warner's Pittsburgh Panthers rolled a five to three favorite over John Heisman's Red and Blue from Quakertown this afternoon before 30,000 fans in the annual Franklin Field battle. The Panthers scored in the first quarter, conquering the Western Pennsylvania team early in the game. In the first game LaMarr Hebron forced forth the winner, while, until a late rush, Pitt's defense held the opponents proved able to penetrate the Panther defense for one or more touchdowns.

But Saturday, against the supposedly unbeatable Quakers, the Pitt team found itself more set, only held the powerful Orange team scoreless but 7 to 0. Two points on Chick Meehan's team

Notre Dame U. of Pittsburgh outfit has been stumbling along this year in a rather unimpressive manner, being tied by Washington and Jefferson and has not outscored by other teams. Last year's game between the two teams was a thrilling 27 to 21 contest with Pitt the winner

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 28.—With Don Laurie and Hank Garrity ready to start today's battle against the University of Virginia team, Coach Bill Roper's Princeton eleven expected to resume its old winning habit, which habit it proposes to continue right through the Harvard game of next week and the Yale game of the week following

The defeat sustained by Princeton in the Navy game stunned the Tiger players and their coaches, but the defeat suffered at the hands of Chicago rudely brought them back to life. They realize now they must play football and play it hard and fast and with intelligence if they are to rescue Tigertown from the doldrums of its history, and they plan to start right in today

POINT SYSTEM UPSET FRENCH ATHLETES

Would Have Defeated British if They Had Not Pressed Own Plan

By Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 11 (By mail).—The French team's defeat in the last dual track meet of England and France was due to a new point scoring system proposed by Jean Bouin, the famous distance runner, it was declared today by the English players accepted the system after a debate and defeated France, 123 to 97.

The method used for seven points for first, five for second, four for third, three for fourth, two for fifth and one for sixth. The English suggested six points for first, five for second and so on for third. Had the French accepted this idea they would have won, 50 to 49

U. S. TURF MEN GET RECORD SALARIES

By Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 10.—(By Mail.)—William Duke and Guy Garner, American racing men, are getting exceptionally fat the stable which the Aga Khan, an Indian prince, is getting together for 1922, will receive the largest salaries ever paid on the French turf.

Duke, formerly trainer for the W. K. Vanderbilt string, is said to have signed a contract with Prince Galitzine for a guarantee of 500 000 francs, with a percentage of 20 per cent. of the stake winnings.

Garner's retainer is made up in dollars and is said to top the amount paid by Vanderbilt to Frankie O'Neil, St. Louis, who up to this year was reputed to be the highest-paid jockey on the continent.

MEDBURY

Says Some People Kick When the Wolf Comes to Their Door, but Look What Noah Had to Put Up With

This is going to be a tough Winter and a lot of us will have a hard job keeping the wolf from the door. The best way to do is to open the door and let the wolf in and he'll starve to death

* * *

You can't keep the wolf from your door, but you don't have to answer the bell.

* * *

Let him stay out on the front porch and maybe he'll be a couple of comforts.

* * *

Lots of times the wolf comes around and goes away, but that doesn't mean he went to college.

* * *

People always try to keep the wolf from the front door, but they'd be better to keep his neighbors' chickens from their back yard.

* * *

We kick when one animal comes to our door, but look what Noah had to put up with.

* * *

The Ringling Brothers were broke one time and the wolf came to their door. Now look at their menagerie.

* * *

But when most of us see the wolf at our door it is no cinch.

* * *

It's fun for everybody except yourself and the wolf.

* * *

He may be snarling at your door but you can't chase him away in a hurry. You have a hard time rushing the growler

* * *

Some people think that a wolf's fur doesn't make a good coat. The wolves have been wearing them for years and they're satisfied.

* * *

A wolf's skin will never wear out as long as you leave it on the wolf

* * *

When you see a wolf at your door you've got one thing to be thankful for. You want to be glad he isn't a hippopotamus.

* * *

Can you imagine a hippopotamus coming to your door and bringing all his friends?

* * *

Of course a hippopotamus is used only as a figure of speech, but oh, what a figure

* * *

One man had a diphtheria card on his door when the wolf came around. People may think that wolves aren't smart, but this one went home for his pinson.

* * *

Always remember that when you share the wolf in the face it's just as tough on the wolf as it is on you

BULLDOG AND THE BEAR BATTLE AT YALE

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 29.—Yale today closed its October football games by meeting Brown University in the Bowl before 45,000 people, the largest assemblage that ever witnessed the annual meeting of the two New England universities.

Brown sent down nearly 1,500 collegians by special train from Providence, arriving at noon, and marching to the bowl headed by the town band, creating a fine and exciting spectacle. The Brown players were with their fellow-collegians and practiced in the bowl shortly after their arrival.

* * *

Two home features of the crowd included the annual outing of the New Haven boys' clubs, numbering 10,000, as the guests of the Yale football section, and the burlesque which the Yale Whiffenpoofs, the burlesque club of the university, planned for the intermission.

* * *

Both Brown and Yale admitted this morning that they expected a fairly demonstration of the forward pass, as both eleven have drilled his feature close to perfection

* * *

Head Coach Ted Jones has decided to start Charlie O'Hearn, for the first time this season, as halfback general. As Wesleyan star last year O'Hearn's quick-kick play closely resembled that of Lowe himself, who is the impressive field general of the [illegible] years ago.

O'Hearn's debut is expected to turn a flood of light on the proposition of his performance against Harvard and Princeton.

* * *

Aside from this the eleven and the exchanging of positions by Jordan and Mallory, Yale made no lineup shifts, although it was admitted that he expected to start Jordan only two full elevens before Saturday

* * *

Yale looked for three or four touchdowns and, although admitting that Brown might get away one of her dazzling forward passes for a score asserted that the chances were no more than even that the Brunonians would register

* * *

While Yale depends on O'Hearn's forward passing and end running, and Aldrich's drop kicking, Brown will display a tackle, plunge play by "Mike" Gillian and a forward toss, Eisenberg to Spellman, that has passed Brown opponents.

New York, Oct. 29.—Two brilliant offensive teams, neither of whom has shown a good defense this season, were scheduled to entertain nearly 40,000 New Yorkers at the Polo Grounds this afternoon

They are Penn State eleven that ran roughshod over Harvard last week, but was forced to content itself with a 21 to 21 score, and Georgia Tech, the "Golden Tornado" of Atlanta, and the most powerful team in the South for the past several years

Odds slightly in favor of the Penn State team prevailed before the start of today's game, but there was many anxious to place money on the Georgia team's chances, figuring that Penn State cannot be fully recovered from its crippling battle of last Saturday

The Penn State team somewhat outweighs that of Georgia Tech, but its backfield, with Dare, Brewster and Harlan, is fast as capable as the set of carriers boasted by Coach Bezdek.

New York, Oct. 29.—The Williams team, despite its defeat by Middlebury last week, was expected to make trouble for "Buck" O'Neill's Columbia varsity eleven at University Heights this afternoon

Columbia outweighs the Massachusetts team by more than five pounds to the man, but to date has found it difficult to form the winning habit, having lost to Dartmouth and Amherst already this season

With Cornell looming as Columbia's opponent next week, Coach O'Neil planned to give his substitutes plenty of opportunity to show their wares.

CHICK HAYES IS AFTER TUSSLE WITH SUGGS

Cambridge Boxer Is Confident He Can Defeat N. E. Featherweight Champion

Chick Hayes, Cambridge's pride and joy, makes a demand of Chick Suggs, New England featherweight champion, that the latter meet the Cambridge boy in a ring battle to decide the championship of New England featherweight title, give consideration to New Englanders and defend the title, if he holds it.

Hayes points to the fact that Suggs hasn't met one boy of this section since he outpointed Charley Elkins and laid claim to the title

Whenever Suggs is ready, provided it is soon, Hayes will be ready to meet him for the title. Inasmuch as Hayes has beaten former holders of the title Al Shubert and Bobby Josselin, he doesn't believe he would have any bother in taking Suggs into camp.

Paddy Owens of Cambridge, now taking a real and serious interest in boxing, wants to get a chance at the New England bantam title.

Friend of Paddy's boxing in the past year has been done out of town. He met Midget Smith, Abe Attell Goldstein and Bud Dempsey among others, and the showings he made against these men makes him think he can take a title away from Abe Friedman.

Owens never fought any better than he did a few weeks ago, at Mechanics building and the crowd showed its approval of his work throughout his battle.

DARTMOUTH FAVORITE OVER CORNELL IN GRIDIRON BATTLE

By CHARLES E. PARKER

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 29.—The "kid" and the "veteran" match brains and ability on the Ithaca gridiron this afternoon.

Jackson Cannell of Everett, but two years graduated from a varsity lineup, and, by several years, the youngest coach handling a big college gridiron eleven, sends his Dartmouth team against the Big Red array of Cornell, coached by Gilmore Dobie, who, for nearly a score of years, has been coaching college football teams.

The two teams are the most important contest in the newly organized "Big Four" games involving the teams of Dartmouth, Cornell, Pennsylvania and Columbia, for the teams which meet today have indicated far more strength than Pennsylvania and Columbia—Dartmouth already having soundly trounced the last named eleven.

Dartmouth has been installed a slight favorite in the wagering, the fact that the Green eleven of last year took Cornell's measure has outweighed the fact, for neither team to date has faced a real test on which sound estimates of the team's comparative ability can be based

Each has won all its games, but Cornell schedule-makers supposedly sought early-season opponents of little ability, while the one or more opponents able to test the Green team this year have proved to be anything but pushovers the Columbia team, with a decided weight advantage over the Dartmouth eleven, did not show the type of play that made Dartmouth's best necessary and the game was emphatically a try-out for the Green's second and third string players after the first half.

The Green faces a weight disadvantage today, and several of its stars, notably Captain Jim Robertson, its great all-around tackle, Chick Burke and Cy Doyle, its fine halfback, and Pat Reid, its single 208-pound lineman on its squad are not in the best of physical condition, and although a few were scheduled to start the contest, some doubt existed as to their ability to play throughout the game.

Dartmouth has, however, enough fresh material to replace any of the first string men should they be forced to retire from the game, and it is confidently expected certain prominent Dartmouth graduates, and to date have been disappointed in their graduates, and similar failure this year may result in an attempt to put the Indians' goal line in danger.

A large delegation of Dartmouth students accompanied the team to Ithaca where they were joined by many Dartmouth graduates, and to date have been disappointed in their graduates, and similar failure this year may result in an attempt to put the Indians' goal line in danger.

MALDEN HIGH FAVORITE IN ANNUAL GAME WITH EVERETT TODAY

By FRED C. LANE.

A minature Harvard-Yale game will be staged today when Malden and Everett will meet at Everett to renew hostilities. The stage settings have all the appearances of the big college classic. There will be bands, cheering by the rooters for both schools and singing by the girl students.

Malden, because of its fine record to date, which entitles it to lay claim on the Suburban League honors until beaten, will enter the game a two to one favorite. The oldest followers of sport cannot remember when Malden invaded Everett and went away a winner. Nothing but victory will satisfy Coach McDonald and his boys, who are now going on high.

* * *

This year, for the first time in many, Malden is in a position to chase the jinx that followed former teams when playing at Everett. Malden's aggression is the threat that has represented that school in years and all eyes are set for supremacy in the Suburban League and possibly also the State championship.

* * *

Everett High has lost some close games to date and will no doubt present its strongest lineup in today's encounter. Coach Binns has had the services of four former Everett football stars who were instrumental in defeating Malden in days gone by.

* * *

Everett has been drilled to break up the forward passing game of Coach McDonald's charges. But as Everett hasn't ends as good as Crawford and Captain Butler nothing but a reversal of past performances will stop the Malden eleven from succeeding with this method of attack. Scoring is possible also.

* * *

Malden's backfield demonstrated to the Cambridge Latin rooters and team that it is capable of hitting the line for good gains, especially so with Upham in the harness. Sandberg, Lewin and Jackson are three running backs who specialize on skirting the ends.

* * *

A game of vital importance for high honors in the North Shore League is the Beverly-Lynn Classical game at Beverly. Both teams are entering the home stretch with honors even and the result will give the fans a fair idea which team will carry off the honting in this league.

* * *

Beverly is the favorite all because of the lightning-like way that team executes its plays. A fleet of trucks has been chartered to carry over the supporters of the Lynn team.

* * *

About 15,000 spectators are expected to take in the Haverhill Mat Bowlers High game that takes place at Haverhill. This contest promises to surpass in attendance the Newton-Haverhill game which last year decided a State championship. Many are from both cities will be among the thousands who will pack the new stadium. Manchester showed to good advantage in playing Medford High early in the season.

MANCHESTER FIGHTS TO TROUNCE HAVERHILL FOR GRID TITLE

Haverhill, Oct. 29.—Manchester battled to accomplish today something that Waltham, Malden, Newton, Duval of Jacksonville, Brockton, St. John's Prep, Lynn Classical and a few other ace elevens have failed to do in the last two years, and that was to beat Haverhill High at the Stadium. The result will have a bearing on the New England title, for although Malden and Waltham have tied Haverhill this year the out of town schools still have rough rivals to play and may not survive.

For the first time in weeks Coach Broderick's band had nearly its full strength. Roberts, tackle, is the only cripple who could not get into the contest. Horsch, quarterback, participated for the first time in three weeks and his return enabled Captain Parisien to play left halfback.

All records in point of attendance for a football game here were expected to be broken. There hasn't been a ticket available for three days and the S. R. O. sign is out. Over 12,000, including 4,000 from Manchester, were to be at the game.

Records of both teams to date follow.

HAVERHILL.

The two teams are nearly even in weight averaging around 155 pounds. The backfield players on the Manchester team are a few pounds lighter than the Haverhill plungers.

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 29.—Willie Herman, lightweight champion of New Jersey, successfully defended his title here when he soundly trounced Young Reno of Trenton in the feature bout of twelve rounds before the Elm Field Club.

Golf at Lexington

The Lexington Golf Club will stage a post-season tournament this afternoon over the club links, North Lexington.

WOBURN PICKED TO SCORE VICTORY

Woburn High School football team, which looks good for the Mystic Valley Interscholastic League title, was to play a league encounter this afternoon with the Arlington High eleven at Livingston Athletic Field in Woburn. Woburn has not lost a league contest to date, while Arlington has not won one. It looked like an easy time for the Woburn outfit. If Woburn annexes the game, Watertown High will be the only one between it and the title. A large number of school football followers will witness this encounter.

WORCESTER FAVORITE TO DEFEAT EXETER

Worcester, Oct. 29.—Worcester Academy is a slight favorite in today's game with Phillips Exeter on Gaskill Field. Exeter has the bulge on Worcester in football since 1918, when Exeter won 12 to 6. Last year the teams renewed their series and Exeter won 7 to 6.

B. U. AGAINST R. I. STATE AT WIGWAM

Coach Whelan Decides to Play Barrett and Fanger as Guards Today

Barrett and Fanger, two new men, will start the game as left and right guards for Boston University in the game against Rhode Island State this afternoon at Braves Field. They have showed up very well in practice all week and Coach Whelan is giving them the chance to prove their ability in today's contest.

Although his leg is bothering him slightly, Cochrane will play in some part of the game. It is probable that Lonergan will not play, as it was found after an examination yesterday that he has a strained tendon. He has had trouble with his knee since the game with Trinity last Saturday.

Feldman will start the game at quarterback, but will be replaced by Waldo later in the game. Weldon is another new man who has shown up well in practice. The two new men have played before, but this is the first time that Coach Whelan is letting them start.

Coach Whelan put the team through a long signal practice. He drilled them on the forward passing and throwing. He finished up with a dummy scrimmage.

Coach Whelan doesn't fear the Rhode Island State team since he considers the Boston University eleven in good shape, but he knows that the Rhode Islanders are strong and is therefore guarding against them.

WAKEFIELD-WATERTOWN GAME RESULTS IN TIE

Lexington was favored through its splendid record of the season to date with not a defeat.

Lexington was strengthened with Challis at guard.

ST. JOHN'S PREP WINS FROM TUFTS FRESHMEN

Danvers, Oct. 29.—St. John's Prep defeated Tufts freshmen on Columbus Oval yesterday by a close margin, 1 to 0. The only touchdown was made by Bi John's left end, McDonald, who completed a forward pass made in the third period.

In the last period Tufts held St John's for four downs on a three-yard line after Winston had intercepted a forward and raced to Tufts twenty-yard line.

Bertelli, Winston and McCabe played brilliantly for the prep eleven while Clark, Thompson and Share starred for visitors.

WESLEYAN WILL BANK ON SCRIGGINS' DROP KICKING

Middletown, Ct., Oct. 29 — Scriggins has improved his drop kicking this week and if Wesleyan gets the ball to the forty-yard line in the Tufts game today he will try a field goal. Wesleyan is banking on the ends, Catain Butler and King, to break up Tufts' play. Both are now in fine condition.

NEWTON AN EASY WINNER OVER RINDGE TECH

Coach Dickinson Uses Nearly All Second String Players in First Quarter

Allie Dickinson's Newtonians had little difficulty in vanquishing Rindge Technical, 18 to 0 at Clark Field, Newtonville, yesterday, and thereby retained its place in the sun on the top rung of the Suburban League ladder, along with Malden and Cambridge Latin.

Newton resorted so little of the Rindge team that Coach Dickinson used nearly all second string men during the first quarter. It didn't take Newton long to score, for four minutes after the opening whistle, Quarterback Stafford raced across for a touchdown after receiving a forward pass on Rindge's 20-yard line. Osborne kicked the goal.

Halfback O'Donnell scored the second and last touchdown in the second period. Osborne failed to kick the goal.

O'Donnell stood on Rindge's 30-yard line in the third period and drop-kicked a pretty field goal.

NORDBERG NOT ELIGIBLE FOR ELEVEN?

Commerce Head Master Disputes Status of Latin's All-Round Athlete

Headmasters of Greater Boston high schools will hold a meeting in the near future to discuss the eligibility of Johnny Nordberg, all-round athlete of Boston Latin, who is charged with having broken Rule 6 Section D, of Athletic Committee rulings.

The rule reads: "No pupil of a Latin or day school or of the Boston Trade School shall take part in any athletic contest with any other school if he has been a member of any secondary school athletic team for more than three years prior to the year in which the contest takes place; the total number of years of such representation shall not exceed four years."

Nordberg started in athletics at Boston Latin School in 1918. That year he won fourth place in the 160-yard dash for juniors. In 1919 he took fourth place in the intermediate 600 and fourth place in the shot put. In 1920 he captured second place in the senior 600 and was placed in the shot put. He played baseball and was a halfback on the team.

Headmaster Downey of Commerce furnished Headmaster Campbell of Latin School with the facts, with the request that Nordberg's record be investigated. According to the rule Nordberg ceased to be eligible for further schoolboy activity at the end of the baseball season in 1920. That would make him ineligible to play for this year's football team.

If the decision of the headmasters is against Nordberg, Boston Latin will forfeit all games won against Boston schools.

COACH SELECTS TECH RELAY RUNNERS

Picks Freshman and Sophomore Teams for the Annual Field Day

Out of over seventy candidates who have tried out for the field day relay teams at Tech, Coach Bancy has finally chosen the twelve members and two substitutes of the '24 and '25 teams as result of the trials.

The freshmen responded to the most call from the ranks for candidates and nearly forty men appeared for the trials. Five are on the cross-country team.

Half of the men on the sophomore team are veterans of last year's field day. Eight candidates for the 1924 team tied for four positions.

The freshman team consists of L. L. Norton, G. L. Bateman, L. Jones, G. J. Lesko, J. M. Campbell, E. W. Gardiner, L. D. Mullen, R. W. Parkinson, C. W. Makepeace, W. F. Brown, E. B. Sandberg, J. E. Russell, first substitute, H. G. Ather, second substitute, G. F. Malone.

The following is the make-up of the sophomore relay aggregation: W. D. McHenry, W. D. Rowe, L. F. Porter, C. H. Deming, A. C. Reed, J. R. Tench, L. P. Marsh, E. S. Coburn, E. M. Bosman, M. S. Meador, A. W. Blodgett, H. J. Lehman; first substitute, R. E. Dorr, second substitute, H. L. Houghton.

Arthur Stringer's Stud Romance THE WINE OF LIFE Illustrated by James Montgomery Flagg

The Story of an Ambitious Young Sculptor Who Goes to New York to Win His Way

By Arthur Stringer
Well-Known Novelist and Author of Country-wide Reputation.

(Published by Arrangement with International News Service.)

HUNGER for order after disorder, for stability after confusion. He began to see what Chester Hardy had meant by that often repeated word of "organization." And Hardy himself, on his return to the city after an Autumn of secluded toil in a fellow-student's abandoned villa at Lenoc, seemed to realize the younger man's predicament. He did more than merely gather up his broken threads of friendship.

He did all that in his power to warp Morrow back to the duly buoyed and buoyant ways of life. He entered into benevolent conspiracies with Charlotte to regenerate her somewhat jaded cousin in the activities of that upper world from which he had shown a tendency to turn away.

And Morrow, swinging back with the pendulum, surrendered to these gentle propulsions. His nursed an active enough craving for the respectabilities of life, just as he had always nursed an innate distaste for that disordered promiscuity of uncleanness and license which is known as bohemia.

But his surrender was not as complete as it appeared. He went about, for all his pretences of preoccupation, carrying the secret conviction that the most valuable ace of life had been left in the air, as grotesque and unfinished as the span of an abandoned bridge. The memory of his marriage did not trouble him so much during those first few weeks, when he knew that Torrie was out "on the road."

It was not until her return to New York that the ritual on began to perplex him. With the announcements that she was about to emerge as a full-fledged star in "Smoke Signals," a new play by a new but neurotic author whom Krassler had disinterred from a hypnophilic resort at Mount Clemens.

Then followed a campaign of that publicity which dominates from imaginative press agents artfully fabricated romances of Torrie Throssel's origin and early vicissitudes, of her personal reminiscences of her past stage experiences, and of tingly picturesque descriptions of her coming role of jazz exponent, costumes of her love for animals and her eccentric methods of study.

Marriage Unmentioned

None of these, Storrow found to his great relief, contained any reference to her marriage. She portrayed herself as a widow.

Day by week and Sunday supplement, he studied these various new photographs with great care, disturbed, as a rule, by certain changes in that one woman he known face, changes which he could not quite decipher.

They merely seemed to accentuate her remoteness, just as the press agent paragraphs, as elusively untruthful as old coins, tended to translate her more and more into the legendary. There were times, however, when it almost frightened him to think that both he and Torrie should be working in the same city and yet to all intents and purposes remain as completely separated as the poles.

His own days it is true, had become more and more crowded, especially after his decision to study architecture for a few months in one of the larger city offices since the designing of the Tecumseh cenotaph had made plain his weakness in the branch of the sculptor's art. It was not, indeed, until he had begun work at Hardy's suggestion on a portrait-bust of Catherine Kleinnert that he stumbled on any direct and personal allusion to Torrie in advance.

Within that Throssel woman the older actress with whom Morrow grew friendly during the period of his infatuation had quite unconsciously found the quiet-eyed artist before her stood in any way personally interested in the subject.

"You'll notice the squash in three or four weeks. Kleinnert intends to throw her right off into deep water, just to get that a Krassler star needn't ever learn to swim!"

"Why do you call it deep water?" inquired Storrow as he went on with his work.

"Because six months from now a show girl into a stage star" reported the statuesque beauty who had bloomed and faded under less auspicious planets. And her face, as she spoke, was not without a touch of regret. "It can't be done, legitimately, even with a Krassler behind you. But in this case he's fired his woman with one of those freak emotional parts where delirium tremens makes up for lack of technique.

And when he throws her onto Broadway she'll probably land on her feet, the same as a cat. He's a wizard at tricking that stuff over. If you give him something plastic enough to work with. It's really a mythological, of course, for it's always Krassler. You get every move word and intonation.

"It's merely Krassler working through some empty-headed woman who's willing to be scooped out of her own body, the same as you scoop out a pumpkin for a jack-o'-lantern and put your own head inside. But Krassler isn't in sight when the trick is done, so the audience sits back and accepts the new star as the real thing."

"Well, isn't she what you'd call the real thing?" Storrow was prompted to argue, "so long as she gets over?"

"But they're not her results, they're Krassler's. And when the time comes for Krassler to step out, there's nothing left but another collapsed balloon."

"Supposing, then, that Krassler keeps behind her?" suggested Storrow, with a perfunctory movement of two about his study. For his mind was very far from being on his work.

"That," retorted the absinthe-eyed woman of the world "all depends on just how she's holding him there."

Nothing more was said on the matter, though the incident left Storrow with a good deal to think over. By the time the Kleinnert bust was completed and its creator had the dubious satisfaction of beholding it installed in a Fifth avenue jeweler's window, tricksily backed by a drapery of dark green velvet, Krassler's production of "Smoke Signals" was duly announced for Broadway.

One day Storrow, idly watching a big poster as it suffered a "four-sheet" to a Sixth avenue stem-board, found a faint thrill course through his body as he spelled out the large and gaudy letters of "Torrie Throssel." A week later he saw the same name on Broadway, picked out in luminous electric bulbs.

Taking a Chance

Then came the play itself. Storrow after many silent and self-critical debates, decided not to see it. But he did not remain long in doubt as to Torrie's success. The criticism of the play itself was generally adverse. The acknowledgment of Torrie's personal triumph, however, was unqualified. As Catherine Kleinnert had predicted, the new-made star had "landed on her feet."

And as the new play settled down for what promised to be a Winter's run, and those friends of Storrow's who knew of his marriage sympathetically sustained their conspiracy of silence as to what had come to be regarded as a mis-step of his earlier life, the outwardly busy man who was inwardly so preoccupied with his projected statue of Tecumseh began to feel that after all he might find it possible to sink life in a mole-hook beneath the tides of time and there, enclosed in his shell, undisturbed by the forces of an older and less tranquillized world.

"May I come in, Gwen?" asked Torrie, almost timidly, unexpectedly appearing at his studio. Her voice, for all its momentary quaver, struck him as deeper and fuller in tone. Through the folds of a veil her face looked thinner and whiter than before.

He placed a chair for her, but she remained standing, staring slowly about the room with its blurring lines receding into unbroken shadow. She even stooped him, with a little gesture, when seemed quite new to her, as he moved to switch on the lights.

"I can stay only a moment," she murmured, with what seemed an almost apprehensive glance towards the still open door. Of the two, he was much more self-possessed

No Looking Back

"It was kind of you to come," he said, disturbed that he was unable to make his tone anything more than perfunctory.

"I was wondering," she hesitatingly began, after the silence had lengthened abysmally between them, "if you'd have the time, later on, to do a bust of me, something like the Kleinnert bust."

It was impossible, he found, to keep from probing for some motive behind this suggestion. But the motive, if there was one, eluded him.

"That was a terrible bust that," he averred, almost lightly, wondering just how he should phrase his refusal of her suggestion.

"No, no! I've heard only nice things about it," she protested, trying to counter a depressing consciousness of formality by a smile which was at first hesitating and then pitiful. "But perhaps you're busy with other work."

"I've got old Tecumseh to work out if I can ever get a model who's aroused by the sound of quick and nervous footsteps crossing his floor-boards. He swung about to find himself confronted by Hermann Krassler in a fur-lined Melton overcoat which merely seemed to add to his diminutiveness.

"Is Torrie here?" that unannounced intruder promptly inquired.

"She is not," Storrow just as promptly retorted.

"Has she been here?"

"Why?"

This man, Storrow remembered, was his enemy, his one remaining enemy. In that thin and nervously strung body with its rat-like audacity merging on insolence he could behold personified those more sordid and seamy forces which were wailing his wife off in a world of her own. Always, to Storrow, he had remained a sinister background figure, awaiting the chance which he had known would some day be his. And now, in a way, he had triumphed. His patience had been rewarded.

"Because its rather important," was Krassler's answer to the other's interrogative rebuff.

Both Up in Arms.

"To whom?" demanded Storrow, as he remembered the futile physical violence with which he had met other enemies, enemies strangely different to this small and rat-like body with the extraordinary light in its deep-set eyes. And much as he longed to clear the air with some purging and relieving outburst of passion, Storrow found it impossible to wring any consolation from the thought of physical assault on anything so defenceless.

"To all of us," retorted Krassler.

"What do you want, anyway?" challenged the other, a little out of his control, and more than ever in his anger, that it was the smaller man's power and the fortitude born of his power which was inflaming him to opposition

The Action So Far in This Stirring Romance

OWEN STORROW, a young sculptor, coming to New York to perfect himself in his art, meets Torrie Throssel, a strikingly lovely girl, studying for the stage under the direction of Herman Krassler, a producer. Storrow saves his cousin, Charlotte Kirkner, from drowning, and she confesses her love for him. Later he marries Torrie and, on the advice of Chester Hardy, gives up modelling and writes a novel of the North Country. Torrie gives up her stage work for his sake. But Storrow discovers some shady episodes in Torrie's past. He leaves her in despair, but returns when he discovers she is to become a mother. Her baby dies and they go to his farm in Ontario to start life anew. She goes riding secretly with Donnie Eastman and he is killed in an accident. She escapes.

with and anewy enough for what I need."

"Oh, you Tecumseh," she echoed, her mind obviously not on what she was saying, but away and her hand went up to her veil. Through that veil he seemed to read on her face an old mingling of sympathy and disappointment. He himself was perplexed by some such-born shyness about her, an air of timorousness which he found hard to reconcile with his earlier memories of Torrie. Without knowing why, as he watched her, he thought of a bird with a broken wing. Her pale face colored a little as she became conscious of his scrutiny, even more

"You know sorry I came!" she asked, almost resentfully.

"You know compelled in honor to tell you very!"

She nodded her head, as though in the confirmation of some inner thought forgotten processes. "I know them. Then she turned away. Her husband watched her as she moved slowly towards the door.

"Must you go?" he mechanically inquired.

She still without looking back at him, nodded her head. Her steps, as she walked towards the door, were slow, like the steps of a person wading through water. But she passed out into the dim-lit and many-odored hallway without stopping or looking back. Storrow, after staring a moment at the still open door, crossed to the wall-switch and lighted the studio

Krassler in Anger

The room, with its shadowy recesses that had seemed haunted by a hubbub of thin shapes and noises, became at a hand's turn a place of flat, stark and uncompromising hard lines. His eyes wandered on to the clay-stained frame-work to which so much of that day had gone in toil

Storrow was still standing there, deep in thought, when he was

THE CROWDED FLAT

HOW TO UTILIZE EVERY ROOM

By Loretto C. Lynch

UNLESS one is wealthy or lives in a part of the country where homes are spacious, there is always the problem of increasing the sleeping accommodations in the small home. With a still smaller average family must use practically every room for a sleeping room. And many letters come to me asking for suggestions

"We have a five-room apartment, and things were going very nicely until my brother lost his wife and asked if he could come to live with us, bringing his three children. Of course, he is paying his share of the expenses, but as he is away much of the time, he wants his children under the eye of his only two sisters."

Two Bedrooms

"We have two bedrooms, and so we must use the living room for sleeping now. But our problem is this—how can we increase the sleeping accommodations in our home so that our growing sister may still have a room which is not visibly a bedroom, in which to entertain her callers? Please do not suggest a folding couch or davenport, as the room is not large enough for this."

A folding crib could be placed in one bedroom, to accommodate the youngest child, while the older sister sleeps in the bed. The other two children might be placed in the other bed. And the sister, who, perhaps stays up later than the rest entertaining callers, might plan to use the living room for her bedroom.

Since you do not wish to have one of the folding davenports, by all means think about a folding table bed. This would give the room not the least semblance of a bedroom. These table beds are not as well known by the public in general as they deserve to be. Folded, they appear to be a nice library table without the least suggestion of a bed about them. Unfolded, they provide all the comforts of a real bed.

They come in both single and double size (if the space permits, I suggest buying a single bed size table. The price varies according to the size and the wood and finish. But at any rate they have the virtue of giving no appearance whatever of a bed, and thus one may have a living room that may at a moment's notice be converted into a sleeping room

The Day Bed

When space permits, one might consider the day bed, so popular at the present time

The folding couch or the box couch, in which one may store Winter garments, unused articles, laundry and the like, are all worthy of consideration where space permits. A folding couch purchased second-hand by a hall-room girl was converted into a thing of beauty by the addition of a cover of monk's cloth in a rather dark shade of tan. Three pillows of plain tailor material were brightened by the addition of a cross-stitch design in bright yellow, green, blue, orange and black.

If you own a home, and it is small, why not have a carpenter estimate on the cost of putting in tier beds, one above the other, especially for the children, just as we have on ocean liners and in Pullmans? Four children could be placed in one room with this arrangement, but there must be, of course, ample provision for air day and night.

Unique Chinese Fruits

Some of the Chinese fruits, cunningly coaxed and lovingly cherished through many centuries, are said by experts to be delicious. There is an orange grown in China that is reported to surpass in sweetness and delicacy any of the oranges which the people of Europe or of America are accustomed; and it may be grown in places where the temperature falls to twenty degrees below the freezing point. There is also a peach unlike anything to which the West is accustomed, and a Winter persimmon that will appeal irresistibly to the European palate.

This melon is at its best in December and January. There are many other good things in China to which Europeans will doubtless be introduced in time. Of some of the choice Chinese fishes, such as bird's nest soup and the like, there are better things in reserve. The fruits are described as surpassing those of any other country

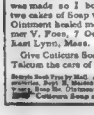
Cuticura Heals Itching Burning Pimples On Face



"My face was entirely covered with pimples which not only disfigured me but bothered me with itching and burning. They began as large red spots and after a while began to fester. They itched so that I had to scratch them which made the burning more intense.

"I used various salves and creams but they gave no relief. The trouble lasted for nearly three months until I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a free sample. In about a week a decided improvement was made. I bought more, and two cakes of Soap with one box of Ointment healed me." (Signed) Elmer V. Foss, 7 Ocean View Ave., East Lynn, Mass.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

Stay Where You Are

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Last Summer out West I met a young lady and we went around together practically all Summer.

Now I have returned to the East and have settled down to a fairly good job. We correspondended regularly and lately the idea has come into both our heads that we should be married.

Should I go out there and get settled and marry. I have a position here and none there.

B. R.

THIS isn't a year to throw up a good job and start off on a wild-goose chase. You'd better stay here and establish yourself in your work. Time enough to talk about marriage when you've proved your fitness to be the head of a household.

An Inadvisable Marriage

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am deeply in love with my aunt, twenty-two years of age and only about two months my senior. She reciprocates my love, and all would go well if the family would not interfere. Your reply in a coming issue of your paper will be sincerely appreciated by an almost heartbroken couple.

A. & D.

THE blood relationship between couples so closely related makes marriage inadvisable. Science has decided that cousins may safely marry. But your relationship is a step closer—nearer than science considers wise.

Do You Know That—

There are five women house-surgeons in English hospitals?

Germany is the only country which has formally abolished tipping?

Umbrellas numbering 30,000 were left in the Paris Underground Railway last year?

Beds, tables, chairs and stools are shown in Egyptian carvings as far back as 4000 B. C.?

One week of manual and agricultural labor is in future to be included in the year's work of every Bulgarian school, for boys and girls alike?

HER OWN WAY

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

THAT afternoon Helen Gorman paid her landlady the two weeks' rent she owed

That debt had rested heavily on her spirits.

Yet her sense of relief in discharging her financial obligations was mitigated by the bearing of Mrs. Ovington's window.

"I am sorry to have kept you waiting for the money," the girl said apologetically.

"That is not the truth, there were some purchases that I was obliged to make. But had I appreciated how fast my salary was going I would have tried to struggle along for a while with out those things

Mrs. Ovington's severe features did not relax. She took the banknotes held out to her and counted them silently before making any comment.

"Young people are apt to be indiscreet," she said then dryly, "I am glad to get this money, for my expenses keep right on whether my lodgers pay me regularly or not."

"Yes, of course they do," Helen rejoined. "I assure you that I will keep you waiting like this again."

"Very well," was the curt acknowledgment of this promise.

Then, after a pause, Mrs. Ovington made another remark

A Matter for Wonder

"Later on, I must ask to have a little talk with you, Miss Gorman."

"Had I not wait, as I am very busy just now. Saturday is a full day for me—seeing to the changing of all the beds, counting out the linen for the laundry—and all that."

"I will be at leisure to talk with you at any time you wish to come up here to my room," Helen said

"Very well. By the way, are you going out this evening?"

"No. At least I do not expect to—unless I run out to get my supper," the girl answered

Mrs. Ovington went on downstairs and Helen returned to the mending she had begun after her talk with her cousin.

Needlework gives a woman occupation for the fingers, but not for the mind.

One can patch, darn and hem deftly while her thoughts wander all over the world or dwell morbidly upon her own sorrows and anxieties

So, although Helen Gorman stitched rips, darned stockings and fastened on buttons, she was mentally uneasy as she reflected on Mrs. Ovington's manner and words

Her landlady had asked the girl if she was going out this evening. Helen had felt slightly mortified when she had had to answer in the negative. There was nobody for her to go with, nowhere for her to go

She wondered what the subject was on which Mrs. Ovington wished to have that "little talk."

Helen Felt Secure

Now that her room rent was paid, Helen felt secure on that point. Perhaps the widow meant to warn her that hereafter she must remit promptly every week But, no—for the girl had just promised to do that in the future

Anyway, if Mrs. Ovington became disagreeable, her lodger could move. Her rent was not exorbitant. There were thirty dollars of it remaining

But these consoling reflections did not lessen Helen's sense of impending trouble. A gloomy shadow was creeping over her spirits.

At last she could no longer stand the solitude and sense of premonition

"She had said that she might go out for supper. She would do so at once.

Anyway, there was nothing to see here in her room, and she must make some purchases for tomorrow's breakfast. A couple of slices of bacon and a roll would be all she would need—but she must buy those this evening

Disclosing the Secret

After looking at all the rugs in the shops, the lady customer decided that she thought she liked the pink one with the purple roses best. "But I like to see it in my room," she said "I suppose you'll send it on approval?" "Well, madam, it's—it's—scarcely usual," demurred the shopman, "but in the circumstances perhaps——" The customer's six-year-old daughter, who had stood silent during the long inspection, now tugged violently at her mother's skirt. "Oh mummy," she said, in her clear treble, "hadn't you better warn him to be sure and get it there in time? Our party's tomorrow, you know."

Anecdotes of the Famous

Israel Zangwill is not among those who turn a deaf ear to autograph-hunters. At least he has not "made it a rule never to give his autograph," and if he is in the right mood the autograph may be accompanied by some witty jest

An admirer once sent him a picture of himself, asking whether he would kindly sign it. It was a poor picture. The author looked at it doubtfully, then wrote on it

"Can this be I—Zangwill?"

Another time, in reply to a request from Andrew Lang, he replied:

"If you, Long will,
I, Zang, will."

A famous astronomer, the late Robert Ball, once told of a farmer who asked him whether he could look at the moon through his telescope

"Certainly," replied Sir Robert. "Come round tonight, and you shall look at it."

"But can't I look at the moon now?" replied the farmer

"I'm afraid not," said Sir Robert.

"Then it ain't such a wonderful telescope as I thought," exclaimed the farmer disappointedly. "Why, I can see the moon at night without it, thanks!"

Hints for the Household

If the fire is dull and smoky, and you want to boil or grill some food, throw a small handful of rock salt and it will soon clear.

The lettuce for a salad should never lie long in water, as this will make it sodden. Wash it thoroughly and then shake it in a clean towel to dry it. If you wish to keep it a while, it is best to cover the leaves with a damp cloth and let it lie in a cool, dark place.

Linen and other thread laces may be shrunk to fit round centre-pieces or doilies. Roll them compactly, dip the upper edge of the roll in water, wetting thoroughly, and let dry while still rolled up. It will be circular when opened and will fit your linen centres without being gathered

Best Recipe Contest

The following are winners of one dollar each in the Boston American's Best Recipe Contest:

Scotch Short Bread

Take 4 cups flour, 3 cups butter, 1½ cups sugar. Put all ingredients into a bowl and work with the fingers till it forms a paste. It takes quite a lot of working. When it is right, it comes away from the bowl. Then turn out on a floured board and roll out thin; form into fancy shapes as you would ordinary cookies. Bake in a slow oven till they begin to take a pale color, then take them out and leave them on the sheet they were baked till they harden. They will be quite soft when taken from the oven, but get crisp when cooler.

Dumplings for Stew

One pint flour (sifted before measuring), ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cream tartar, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1 scant cup milk. Stir cream tartar and salt into the flour. Add baking soda to the milk. Make a dough soft enough to handle. Pat it out half-inch thick; or you can make it softer and drop by spoonfuls into the stew. Be sure to have stew boiling and leave room for dumplings to rise. Cook 10 minutes. Do not add any shortening to dumplings, as it will make them heavy

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

Thomas W. Lamont, apparently, failed in his mission to Mexico.

• • •

Lamont wasn't the ideal man to send. He lacks the proper personality to conduct delicate negotiations with Latin-America. He isn't suave enough. He lacks that charm, that cordiality, that heartiness, needful for winning the good will and getting into the good graces of others.

Lamont is too sharp, too brusque, too much to the point to do business successfully with polite, high-grade Latins, who refuse to be rushed, who put courtesy above "hustling."

Lamont is injuring his own future in a most foolish, short-sighted, regrettable way. Such men as Lamont become known to the American public through what is written about them and their activities. Not one American in a thousand ever has, of course, opportunity to become personally acquainted with our financial and business leaders.

• • •

Now, Lamont is rapidly losing the respect and confidence of the representatives of the public in the financial world, the financial reporters, because they have learned, and complain, that they can't tell when he is telling them the truth or, as they call it, giving them a "steer," at the times these financials are trying, summon up enough courage to convey to the public their estimate of Lamont—and the result will not be conducive to the further growth of Mr. Lamont in the financial world.

• • •

Any man who forfeits the public's confidence doesn't stay at the top of the heap very, very long.

• • •

Schwab is a great fellow. While others have been sweating over retrenchment, he has gone ahead planning extensions, he cheerfully announces. He learned from Carnegie that the best time to build is when labor and materials are most plentiful.

• • •

Talking about members of leading international banking firms, those in the "know" are wondering how soon a split-up will come in another I.—portant house that recently lost its senior member. Every time there was an acknowledged leading partner, jealousies were rife. On one occasion a burst-up was imminent, but peace—or, rather, a truce—was established.

One of the partners around whom the jealousy has centered is admittedly extremely shrewd. But he has an unhappy knack of rubbing his associates, as well as others in the financial community, the wrong way. He doesn't seem to be able to forget that he's smart; so that his demeanor, his air of superiority, gets the goat of other people. And in consequence, he has few real friends who would stand by him in case of an open break.

Mexico has a lot of salt water, yes. But she also has a tremendous lot of oil. Don't tell me selling that Mexican oil stocks short unless you don't mind losing money.

W. W. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, has been much criticised for his attitude towards labor since his return from his military experiences. I confess to having publicly condemned some of his utterances and actions.

Yet did you notice that when the labor leaders formulated their strike plans they left the Pennsylvania men to be the very last to be called out? The plan was to call out first the men on roads where discontent was rifest, so that the strike would have a successful start. According to report, the leaders learned, sometime before they made peace, that the Pennsylvania employes would not obey any strike summons.

May it not be, in view of events, that Atterbury was wiser than his critics, and that he knew how to go about the winning of the confidence of a majority of his men?

Firmness does sometimes prove more effective than pussyfooting.

If you have in mind buying steel shares, don't wait too long. The turn in the industry is here. The shares should shortly reflect this fact.

The two European visitors who will capture and stir the public imagination will be Lloyd George (if he comes) and Foch. Yet no two characters could contain more contrast. Foch is retiring; Lloyd George thrives on the limelight. Foch is relentless, uncompromising; Lloyd George is an arch opportunist. Foch lays plans ahead and presses steadfastly towards their accomplishment; Lloyd George changes his plans almost as often as he changes his linen. Foch isn't much of a speechmaker; speechmaking is Lloyd George's forte.

Nevertheless, Lloyd George can, on occasion, show the courage of a lion. He can inspire the confidence like of political leaders and the common people. He knows human nature and no statesman has ever been quicker than he to meet changes in public sentiment and change his course accordingly. At Utah Metals, Inc. 1½ 1½ 1½ 1½

Stocks Are Irregular in New York at the Close; Market Has a Heavy Tone

TRADING ENDS IN A SLIGHT REACTION

Rails Rule Fractionally Lower; Steels Down; Gains by Oils Are Reduced

By W. H. ROSS
Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular in New York at the close, but the market had a heavy tone and might be called weak. In the second hour rails weakened and foreign oils advanced. But the latter did not retain all their gains.

There was a slight reaction at the finish which affected issues of all kinds. Stocks were down at the end. Most losses were fractional and there were a few stocks to close a point or more higher. Trading was of good volume for a week-end session. Foreign exchange was steady.

ADVANCED AT OPENING.

The initial price movement was upward, most issues starting with small gains. The covering of shorts, which was a big factor Friday afternoon, was responsible in the morning. Rails, tobaccos, sugars and copper showed the most group strength. Steels began higher, but were affected to some extent by profit taking. Foreign oils had more support than domestic petroleum shares. After a few minutes prices eased off, but the reactionary tendency was brief and not pronounced, and before the session was half over the trend was again upward. But whether up or down changes were narrow in most instances. Traders were conservative as to commitments at the week end. Burns Bros. sold at a new high for the year. Shipping shares were strong and more active than before this week. Trading had no distinctive feature and reflected the uncertainty prevailing in business and fancial circles.

EXPECT LOWER RATE.

The threat of a railway strike and a high money rate were adverse factors during most of the week, but at the close the former had been eliminated and the passing of the latter was expected. Also there are plenty of money available for stock market purposes. Monday it was stated that fully $5,000,000 was unloaned on the stock exchange. ..ext week November collections are to be met, and nearly half of an issue of British notes, amounting to $150,000,000 and maturing on Tuesday, are still to be paid off. When the money situation clears up, there will be investments returns to banks an easier monetary situation should follow, and there may not be any marked improvement during the coming week. Reports as to the prospects for the steel industry are encouraging, but the real earnings for September do not stimulate hope as much as the forecast showing.

KLAN CLEANED UP BAD OIL CAMP

Spillane Tells How Holdups and Murders Were Halted in Mexia

By RICHARD SPILLANE

On the Road, Oct. 29.—"I don't admire the Ku Klux Klan," said the man from the Mexia Oil fields who was in the smoking compartment of the sleeper Oklahoma-bound, "but they certainly did a good work at Mexia.

"I've been in a new oil field? Well, if you haven't you've never met the toughest bunch of wildcatters to be found anywhere on earth. At the first announcement of an oil strike they stream in from everywhere.

"Ranger is playing out and it's pretty dull in all the proved districts of the Southwest, so when the news of the strike at Mexia spread abroad there was a rush for the new field.

MOB POURED IN.

"I don't know whether Mexia is the real thing or not. They have half a dozen wells in, but it takes time to show where the oil is in big volume.

"Well, the mob poured into Mexia. In a few days you couldn't get a bed in hotels or boarding houses without Waldorf-Astoria prices. They came by train, by flivver, by foot and some, I think, afoot. I've seen cars pulled by a snake ever since I got to Texas, but anywhere else west of the Mississippi River is the place where you can get a 'hot dog' and coffee in a restaurant and the restaurant man may charge $100 a month for a shack that didn't cost $500 to build.

"Most of the mob that swept down on the Mexia was broke. The combination of an oil boom trailer who is broke and a snake is 'sticking up' a man at night and capturing his roll. There were a few holdups. Also there were a few killings. The persons shot were bad citizens. The men who did the shooting were officers of the law.

FEAR-INSPIRING SIGHT.

"Then there was a parade of the Ku Klux Klan. Do you know, it was a awe-inspiring sight? There's nothing in the spectacle of a long procession of masked men that I can't describe. Next the klan warning was put on the door of a lot of joints that gouged people terribly. Immediately thereafter it was difficult to get booze in Mexia.

"I never saw a new oil field so orderly as Mexia. I've gone around at night and never saw a gun. Perhaps although I know there are as many stickup men there as in any other field in the Southwest.

"The king of the wild catters brought in a new field. They all laughed at him first, but he spent a million dollars backing up his faith that there was oil in the district, and now he is backing the Standard. He made a speech in Dallas practically telling the Standard to 'butt in' that may be a bluff. The Magnolia, which is owned by the Standard, pays a short pipe line to its storage tanks, six miles from its wells.

HAS NO PIPE LINE.

"The wild catter has wells, but no pipe line. I hear he is short of money. If he can build a pipe line he may make out, and if he can't it is not wise to buck the Standard. They've cut a couple of prices, by the way, of sixty cents a barrel on Mexia oil. That may be low, but it is pretty well up to new oil prices.

"There's talk of the Royal Dutch Shell buying some of the properties. I don't know. An oil field is a great place for rumors.

"Why am I leaving? Well, that's another story. Do you know I've been tried on with the guy who had some land in Oklahoma which he said had oil. I sold stock in it to a lot of people who live in Massachusetts—and then I had reason to think he never had any oil. He drilled a well. I don't know whether he did it in the level or just to make it look as though he did it more stock. Part of the proposition on which we sold stock was that he would drill a well to the second if the first one proved dry.

"What do you know? He drilled the other day that the first drilling has brought in a good well—2,000 or 3,000 barrels a day. I don't know about it. But I'm in a mess. I'm not sure yet whether my man is on the level. I wrote to a lot of people to whom I sold stock that he was a crook, and that he never drilled a well to prove he is an honest man.

IN FOR A ROW.

"I guess I'm in for a fine old row with him, and maybe some of my friends back home think I'm a crook, but that's my rate. I've got an interest in that property and Mexia has to get along as best it can without me until I see just how I stand in Oklahoma.

"Is the Mexia strike the real thing? Yes and no. There's a lot of exaggerated reports of oil stupendously new ones. When you hear of a 25,000-barrel well double your guard. That's all.

"There's one thing I don't like about Mexia. There's no roar to the flow. I'm afraid it's sand. Six months they'll pump salt water.

"But you never can tell. The geologists all passed up Mexia and said there was no oil thereabouts. Now they say there's oil all around the country. Ranger was inexhaustible and now it's petering out. It's all a gamble, gambling is a game, and that's why I'm in it, I guess.

"But those Americans down at Mexia don't care to gamble about what the Ku Klux Klan people will do with their property. They're keen on your life."

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—In the face of considerable profit-taking, the market showed further broadening, both in range and activity, and the volume of transactions for the first time in many weeks exceeded the million share mark. There was a positive air of cheerfulness in Wall street as one stock after another broke out of the state of lethargy and began to show signs of buoyancy.

ALTHOUGH the moving impulse of the buying was furnished by the settlement of the railroad strike, and although the rails displayed firmness and increased activity, the real feature of the market was furnished by the industrials. The oils kept up their pace, with indications here and there of profit-taking in issues that have advanced materially in the last few weeks. The steels advanced in response to a brisk demand under the leadership of U. S. Steel common and Bethlehem B. Crucible ran up sharply but reacted later, while neglected Vanadium made an upturn of a full point.

SOME of the specialties showed positivity and firmness, among these being American International Marine preferred and Atlantic Gulf & West Indies. The coppers moved upward with buying of Sonora, on a large scale attracting considerable attention. The fine statement of the Products came in for gratified comment.

FURTHER gains in gold holdings, with a reduction in note liabilities, furnished the occasion for a gain in the Federal reserve ratio to the new high level of 70.3.

ABANDONMENT of the strike was the determining influence at the opening of the market. Rails were the leaders in strength and activity, forcing Pacific issues to the greatest advance with a gain of 2¼ points from Thursday night's close. The extent of the rise indicated profit-taking on a large scale, which, while causing recessions, was well absorbed and gave the market an undertone which conservative houses favor. So soon as the early selling in the rails had exhausted itself, the industrials became active and strong under the leadership of U. S. Steel and remained so until the close.

THERE was little inclination on the part of traders to follow the advance in the railroad group. Absence of the strike, if it realized, does not settle the railroad problem, and until a definite settlement is effected, investment buying rather than speculative operations is likely to be the principal support of this group.

THERE was evidence Thursday of excellent selling in Pacific Oil and this same selling was in evidence in grain Friday. An unconfirmed report that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey-Standaria has bought control of the open market brought some outside buying into the market. The selling by New York persons who were large buyers when the price was twelve points or more lower.

GENERAL ASPHALT was extremely well bought all day, most of the buying being for the account of those exceptionally strong firm. Traders anticipated the strength in the reports of the opening of a $6,000,000 plant on the company's property. It is understood that the plant will be ready to operate before the end of the year, making a total of about 2,000 barrels per day. Asphalt and the Royal Dutch Companies.

DIRECTORS of the Studebaker Corporation will meet Monday and it is understood will declare the regular dividends. The output, it is approximated that of the second quarter, which totaled 23,000 cars, and earnings probably will be about $2.50 per share, making a total of about $15.50 per share for the nine months. It is expected that some of the motor companies will add much to their earnings during the last quarter as several of them buying of a confident nature comes into the market on recessions.

VANADIUM STEEL was bought partly in sympathy with the strength in other steels and partly because the company has a monopoly on the products and the automobile companies are understood to be making inquiries on considerable tonnages of steel for next year. Vanadium has not responded to the improvement which has occurred in the other steel stocks and it is understood the firm which were active in the stock a year or two years ago are taking such offerings as come into the market.

THE contrary movement of Consolidated Textile and some of the woolens caused considerable comment. Although the same bankers sponsor Consolidated Textile in practically all the low of the year, while American Woolen is more than 20 points above its low, Consolidated Textile has been backward in its recoveries. It will be seen that the issue has been completed with the result that out of a total of 733,096 spindles operated by the company, only 25,000 now are idle.

ATLANTIC GULF & WEST INDIES, Marine preferred and American International Corporation were strong throughout the day. A. I. C. and Atlantic Gulf made new high prices. The present movement and Marine preferred regained the loss it had sustained in the last week. Buying in A. I. C. was based on a vague report that a reorganization scheme for the better has occurred in the company's affairs. Activity in shipping, largely in connection with the movement of sugar from Cuba, has stimulated interest in the shares and speculative groups have not been slow in seizing their advantage. All of these issues are out of line with the general market, in the opinion of observers.

No Hard Coal Freight Cut

In regard to the report that roads would voluntarily reduce freight rates for anthracite, Vice-President Russell of the Philadelphia & Reading said: "The statement as to reduction in rates on anthracite coal by Philadelphia & Reading is erroneous, and there is no basis therefor. In the public interest, this corporation should be given wide publicity."

FEAR BREAKUP OF BRITISH EMPIRE

Why Purchase of English Money Has Fallen Off Here, According to Evans

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—When you are drowning it is bad etiquette to grab your would-be rescuer by the neck and strangle him or pull him to the bottom with you.

This is a suggestion that, in one form or another, is in the minds of many people with respect to the approaching conferences for the reduction of armaments. It would be going too far to say that the whole world outside of the United States is drowning, but anybody can see that many of the nations are struggling about in aimlessly waves and that through their wiser men, and with the co-operation of American counselors, they are trying to get back to shore. They are afraid that with the multiplicity of subjects coming before that body the whole affair will be complicated and the purpose of the conference fail of achievement.

AN ANTIQUE PRACTICE.

That is one of the elements in the prices of exchange, which in the case of sterling, the greatest of them all, has declined. Likewise the fear of a disintegration of the British Empire has indged in the minds of many people accordingly the purchase of English money, which formerly was considered one of the most safe devices people as a hedge against unfortunate happenings in this country, is a thing so far in the past as to be a real antique. Even at recent low prices it seems to have no charm.

In this connection of course Ireland is emphasized and India is not forgotten. As a matter of fact the British expressed the fear that England and Ireland had reached the "Parting of the Ways." Many things are said in private conversations that for diplomatic reasons do not appear in the public prints.

But for the more immediate purposes the present movement of commodities are the available reason of the decline. Something like three million bushels of Canadian wheat are in the way from Canada to British ports and heavy purchases of sugar have been made by the agents of the British.

MAY LIFT TOTAL.

The items are large enough to make quite a marked stack of exports for the current month and possibly may be connected with other commodities now going out freely, will lift the total above the recent level of imports. There are also large sales of sterling bills.

There is another factor in the opposite direction which is important as a sign of what is going on internationally. It is estimated that the people of excellent quality are fleeing from the wrath of the war god in Europe. Considerable numbers of British are migrating to British Colombia, among the former army officers. They will at least find themselves in close touch with a country which has every probability of increase in wealth.

We have troubles of our own, but they are comparatively small. Among the things that we have not to fear is anything in the issues between the railroads and their men. It is declare that the thing should have gone forward to an absolute showdown.

DECISION POSTPONED.

The "recommendation," they declare, simply postpones a real decision and drags the mat

RAIL HEADS SEEK FORMER POWER, HAPGOOD SAYS

Lasting Condition of Roads Is Due to Attitude of Managers, Writer Declares

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.
Boston American Staff Correspondent

Washington, Oct. 29.—The fact that the railroad strike has been avoided makes it easier to look at the more permanent aspects of the situation.

The real responsibility for the lasting conditions must be with the managers and they are in reality fighting for a return of the arbitrary power which they had a generation ago.

The outstanding fact is that the managers of the roads, by their hostile and uncompromising stand, are merely bringing nearer the day when the government takes over the roads.

A few go so far as to say that the managers of the roads know this fact perfectly well and are laying a shrewd plan to make the people pay for the roads almost twice as much as they are worth.

Those who hold this view say that when the roads demanded a return to private control, at a time when every active man over nineteen ahead they were not so silly as they seemed.

FORM BASIS FOR CLAIMS.

Their purpose, in other words, was not to make good but to juggle the figures in such a way as to form the basis of exhorbitant claims when the moment for the return of ownership comes.

My own opinion is that the managers merely blundered along, drunk with their own propaganda. I may be wrong, however, and the plan of getting out from under at high prices may be reality.

The article from which I quoted some days ago, and inadvertently credited to the Manufacturers' Record when it should have been the Manufacturers' News, speaks seriously of the tendency of nationalization of our basic industries."

It may be that more business men than we think see the trend toward government ownership.

There is no short, better informed or more highly respected member of any board in Washington than Joseph B. Eastman of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He said the other day:

"I have in mind the propaganda which . . . turns the spotlight upon everything that is radical and can add a few lies for good measure.

NECESSITY CONCEDED.

"The necessity of Federal control was conceded at the time when it was undertaken. . . . One of the numerous reasons was the preservation of railroad securities from financial demoralization. . . . The roads were operated during federal control substantially the same staff as now.

"During the first six months after the return to private control the deficiency was upward of six hundred million dollars. In the succeeding twelve months, following the most stupendous increase in rates ever put on railroad rates, the deficiency was at least three hundred and fifty million. . . .

"It was kept from reaching a still larger sum only by drastic retrenchment which have left the country citizens which have left the country with one of the largest percentages of back-order cars in its history.

Then, as applying to the wild talk about this week's situation, read what this cool and conservative expert has to say about labor.

"The impression has been spread broadcast that the increases in wages during Federal control were the product of intrigue and political pressure. The facts are that the major increases were made upon the recommendation of a bi-partisan board of arbitration headed by Franklin K. Lane, which thoroughly considered both sides.

CAPITALISTS PASSED ACT.

Then came a 21 per cent. increase recommended by the Cummins Esch-Cummins act. That act was passed by the capitalists.

Since then has come the 13 per cent. reduction. The Esch-Cummins board said:

"The scale of wages paid railroad employes is substantially below that paid for similar work in other industry." It also said that the scale of living for the man had been lowered since 1914.

The national agreements, that are backed at now, were received when the transportation system was in the hands of Walker D. Hines, and the whole of all railroad men until he began to serve the government.

Mr. Grimm has now returned from Europe to this country. It might amuse the Cumming' committee to call the Grimm board and ask him a whole lot of things.

"ROOSEVELT OF CHINA" TO SPEAK IN NEWTON

Dr. Tehyi Hsieh will speak in Trinity Church, Newton Centre, tomorrow evening at 7:15 in the fourth of the series of Disarmament Services. His subject will be: "What About China?"

Dr. Hsieh has been called "The Roosevelt of China." He is now on the conference at Washington on the staff of the consulting representatives under the auspices of the Chinese Trade and Labor Bureau. He speaks English fluently and has been stating the case for China before many of the chambers of commerce of this country.

President Murlin of Boston University says: "He created enthusiasm everywhere he spoke."

SOMERVILLE BOY IS KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

Five-year-old Nolan Addison of No. 24 Jay street, West Somerville, was struck and almost instantly killed on Holland street near the Hodgdon Grammar School, Somerville, by an auto owned and operated by William J. Brown of No. 21 Winthrop road, Lexington.

According to the police the boy was standing on the sidewalk in front of the school, and suddenly darted into the street, and in the path of the oncoming machine. The wheels passed over his body.

Brown, who is a former president of the Somerville Board of Trade, is held blameless by the police.

"LAKME" BILLED FOR ENGLISH OPERA

Boston Society of Singers to Appear in Delibes' Work at the Arlington

Delibes' lovely opera of the Orient "Lakme" which brought so much fame to Tetrazzini, Galli-Curci and Garrison as the medium of its wonderful possibilities for a coloratura soprano will be given at the Arlington Theatre by the Boston Society of Singers all next week. The Bell Song will be in very good hands and throughout the week with Miss Clara Shear and Helene Morrill alternating in the stellar role. Delibes has ingeniously used bells to give character to this number, which is of the intricate one, especially in the refrain, where voice, woodwind and bells blend with many charming touches. The story of Lakme deals with a heroine of the same name who is the daughter of Nilkantha a fanatical Hindoo who hates the foreign invaders of his country. This is the role which will give Herbert Waterous and Edward Orchard, the basses, a great opportunity. Gerald Kane the tenors, Mr. Robinson and Mr. Arnold, sing on alternate nights, and Frederick, for which Mr. Sasso and Mr. Henry, the baritones, are cast, are officers of the British army in India, who after visit to the sacred grounds of a Hindoo temple and meet Lakme.

LONDON STRING QAURTET

Arrangements are now being made to increase the list of Chamber Music Concert Music in Boston by making larger the number of appearances of the famous London String Quartet. The first Boston concert is on Saturday afternoon, November 26th. This comes after their New York recital. Then they will appear in Boston and go out to the Pacific coast; and from there to Honolulu, returning for February to the States. It is then expected that at least one pair of subscription concerts will be given in our Jordan Hall.

FIFTH SYMPHONY PROGRAM.

The fifth program of the Boston Symphony concerts will be given at Symphony Hall on the afternoon of November 11, and Saturday evening, November 12, following the first regular Southern trip of the season which will occupy the coming week. At this pair of concerts, Faremy, the very fine Hungarian violinist, who has just arrived in this country from Europe, where his fame as one of the very highest has been won as soloist, playing with the orchestra. Tschaikowsky's perennially popular concerto in D major.

Pierre Monteux will also conduct the Second Symphony of Sibelius in D major, "A Poem of Youth," by Davis. Stanley Smith, the noted American composer, which will have its first performance on this occasion, and, in observance of Armistice Day, Georges Huer's symphonic poem "Emotion." The following sub-titles are written over the music by the composer: Anguish, Prayer, Tumult, Subsidence, Bells of Peace, Trumpets of Victory.

CHALIAPINE COMING.

The great Russian bass singer, Chaliapine, who has sung been the head of opera and concerts throughout Russia and the world, is making a short tour of America, which will include a single appearance in Symphony Hall on Thursday evening, November 17, at 8:15. Although this remarkable artist has sung on former occasions at the Metropolitan Opera House, he has never appeared in Boston before. In his recent concerts in London, he was welcomed as the finest dramatic singer living. His rendition of this country will include appearances with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

SAN CARLO OPERA.

With the closing of the subscription book of the two weeks season of the San Carlo Grand Opera which commences at the Boston Opera House a week from Monday the seat sale was opened to the public next week. Judging from the demand there will be virtually capacity houses at every one of the sixteen performances. The fact there will be fifteen different operas presented, there being but one repeat, "Madame Butterfly," has met with much favorable comment from music lovers.

The total amount of the subscriptions to the three series and not including the subscriptions made for the Saturday night or the Wednesday and excludin., the public sale to date amounts to $24,000, according to a report made by Richard Newman, the local subscription manager to Fortune Gallo, general director of the San Carlo Grand Opera who made a flying trip to Boston a couple of days ago.

There will not be any changes in the repertoire for the two weeks which is set as follows:

FIRST WEEK.

Monday, "Carmen."
Tuesday, "La Boheme."
Wednesday matinee, "Faust."
Wednesday evening, "Aida."
Thursday, "La Forza Del Destino."
Friday, "Lucia."
Saturday matinee, "Madame Butterfly."
Saturday evening, "Rigoletto."

SECOND WEEK.

Monday, "Faust."
Tuesday, "La Traviata."
Wednesday Matinee, "Hansel and Gretel."
Wednesday evening, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."
Thursday, "Madame Butterfly."
Friday, "Aida."
Saturday matinee, "Rigoletto."
Saturday evening, "Otello."

Other Theatres

PARK THEATRE.

Declared to be a screen masterpiece equal if not superior to his enormously successful production of "The Miracle Man," George Loane Tucker's last picture production, "Ladies Must Live," will be the feature at the Park Theatre next week. Betty Compson is the featured player in "Ladies Must Live."

The story deals with the troubles of certain women who, since ladies must live, plan to make that living as easily as possible. To the discernment of this theme, the genius of Mr. Tucker found its finest expression, the result being a picture of supreme interest and appeal to every fan. Robert Ellis and Jack Gilbert have the two leading men's roles. The picture is based on a novel by Alice Duer Miller.

This will be followed by Tom Moore in "From the Ground Up," another Rupert Hughes story which contains all the laughs and thrills that usually appear from the able pen of this masterful artist.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS.

"Blue Bonnett," a comedy of youth and adventure by George Scarborough, is announced as the attraction to be offered by the popular Somerville Players for the coming week. "Blue Bonnet" comes to Somerville with the stamp of approval placed on it by many of New York's most fastidious theatregoers, who viewed and enjoyed it during its long run at the Princess Theatre. "Blue Bonnett" combines up the action with an atmosphere of hominess, the old-fashioned love idea that all of us really care for after all is said and done. Arthur Howard and Enid Markey will appear in the leading roles while the remaining members of the cast have been assigned to parts suitably adapted to their work. The piece will be staged under the careful supervision of James Doyle.

GAYETY THEATRE.

"Town Scandals," the burlesque offerings at the Gayety Theatre next week is proclaimed by critics and others alike to be the most sensational production of the year 1921. Heading a cast of famous performers is Ethel Shutta, dancing comedienne.

The burlesques is in two acts and eight scenes. The display of costumes is one of the largest shown by any company that has appeared in Boston and the scenic effects present a riot of color.

The chorus is pleasing, both as to face and form, and each girl is a talented singer and finished dancer.

A New York Chinatown scene is one of the most realistic ever put on a local stage and another scene of striking originality of the devil's grotto. In the close of the first of the two of the principals, Miss Shutta and Charles Fagan, present a specialty that is a startling surprise. In another scene Miss Ethel Shutta gives a wonderful single exhibition of a youthful gunman dope fiend.

CENTRAL THEATRE.

Work on the new Central Theatre, which has been in process of construction for the past several months, is nearing completion and in all likelihood will be ready for opening the latter part of November. The Central Theatre is in the heart of Somerville, being located at the corner of Highland avenue and Central street. It will be devoted exclusively to the exhibition of first class feature photoplays and other screen features.

SECOND THEATRICAL BALL.

"Meet me at the Fountain of Fortune," is the slogan that will herald the second annual ball or the Theatrical Stage Employes Local No. 10, Boston, Mass., which takes place at Mechanics Building, on Thursday evening, January 19, 1922. The committee in charge, which comprises a large number of active members associated with the various theatres of Boston, have begun work on a program that will be unusually attractive as well as extensive.

FACTORIES HELP SCHOOLS GET CLASSES

Supervisor Mahoney Lauds Their Co-operation in Americanization Work

Associated Industries of Massachusetts was revealed as a trail blazer in the Americanization of immigrants at the second day of the organization's annual meeting.

John J. Mahoney, State supervisor of Americanization, called attention to the part Associated Industries is playing in Americanization. Team work between the public schools and the organization, he said, has resulted in the forming of 860 classes of adult immigrants in shops and factories under school department supervision.

Mr. Mahoney pointed out that in two years the number of foreign-born adults studying English under the supervision of the State has increased from 3,200 to 12,000.

A resolution against a high surtax was adopted and forwarded to President Harding and Congress.

MARY GARDEN GIVEN GREAT OVATION

It would be folly to try to criticise the performance of Miss Garden as presented by Hall last night, when she gave a concert in conjunction with the Harvard Glee Club.

She is Mary Garden, gifted, inimitable, brilliant, distinctive, and colorful.

She has a charm and buoyancy that drop into the commonplace no more than does her singing.

Fresh from a trip to Paris, Miss Jarden appeared in her best, slightly han before, and with her hair newly 'bobbed." She was radiant.

Her program was well chosen and received enthusiastic applause from the large audience.

It was as follows: "Arioso," by Delibes; "Triste Ritorno," by Barthelemy; Deodia Lieza, from Puccini's 'La Boheme"; "Lever du Soleil," by Erlanger; "The Luring" and "My Ship and I," by Reginald Hard Man, and the Lullaby from "Joselyn," by Godard.

This was the first of the annual series of concerts given by the Harvard Glee Club. Under the leadership of Mr. Archibald T. Davidson. The singers showed their careful training and gave a highly creditable performance.

VECSEY SOLOIST FOR FIFTH SYMPHONY

To most Bostonians the Boston Symphony Orchestra is just a name, because the concerts are sold out for the entire season long in advance, and at high prices, and the chances to hear it are nil. Therefore it is well that a series of five special concerts at popular prices are to be given on Monday nights this Winter should be welcomed with delight. There will be five soloists with these concerts, all artists of importance—Hofrovitch, the pianist; John Powell, pianist; Estelle Liebling, soprano; Richard Hagin, the concert master and violinist, and Jean Bedetti, the cellist.

The concerts are being arranged with the co-operation of several of the big organizations like the Y. M. C. A., the capacity houses are assured. The first concert takes place Monday evening, November 24.

36-CENT AVERAGE FALL OF FACTORY PAY IN N. Y.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 29.—The weekly average wage of factory workers in New York State dropped 36 cents during the month of September. The downward trend of the wages was halted in August, but has started down again. The average factory worker was paid $23.07.

Honored in Home District

John R. Murphy, if Elected, Will Not Try to Climb Social Heights From the Mayor's Office

The character and size of the meeting to organize the campaign for Honorable John R. Murphy in Charlestown, his home district, shows that in the case of Mr. Murphy, at least, the old saying that a man is never without honor save in his own country has exceptions. Mr. Murphy is certainly full of honor in his own country, in his own home district of Charlestown.

Indeed, it was to be expected. He does not have to make any long journey from one part of the city to the other, during the election time, in order to greet his old neighbors. What was his home when he was a boy is his home now, and those who were his neighbors then are his neighbors now, if they have not moved away. This does not indicate that Mr. Murphy is qualified for Mayor. But it does indicate that if he is elected Mayor he will not be tempted to break any election promises in order to gain the smiles and condescension and patronage of ladies and gentlemen from districts of greater social distinction. It does prove that if he is elected Mayor he will not undertake to climb the social ladder from the Mayor's office. It does prove that he will be the same plain "Jack" Murphy when he is elected Mayor that he has been during all the years in which he has passed his life in Charlestown.

The finest thing in a man, in a leader, in our democratic Republic, is the education, the ability, the industry, the legitimate pride of the best, and yet united with the feeling of comradeship and equality and respect for the commonest. We want our leaders men "who can walk with Kings and not lose the common touch," and "with whom all men count, but none too much."

Every man and woman in Charlestown knows that such a man is John R. Murphy.

Cancer Week

Knowledge to Be Spread of This Dread Disease in Every State Beginning Tomorrow

Cancer week idea originated in a body of men who were sent as delegates from all over the country to represent the great national medical societies and to formulate some plan by which to control this disease. These men organized the American Society for the Control of Cancer, and it is this society which is responsible for "Cancer Week."

We lost 80,000 men during the great war. In the same period we lost 180,000 through cancer. Cancer now causes the death of about one out of ten of all persons over forty years of age. Although it is among our most dreaded diseases, it can be cured and will stay cured if only it can be recognized and treated by modern measures in its early stages.

It is the delay in obtaining treatment that is fatal; not the nature of the disease itself. It begins as a local growth and only as it later spreads to other parts of the body does it progress from the curable to the incurable stage. During the early local stage, cancer seldom or never causes pain, and it is largely on this account that the patient is willing to neglect the warning symptoms and allow the disease to progress to an incurable extent.

Many people are now cured of cancer every year, but these numbers can easily be doubled or trebled when the patient and his physician also realize that delay is fatal, and that early cancer can be cured.

A public meeting will be held in Faneuil Hall, Tuesday evening, November 1, at which doctors will tell us about cancer and how to recognize it, and what the possibilities of curing it are. It should be filled.

Ku Klux Klan in Boston

Unbelievable That There Are People in This Community Who Would Join Such an Organization

The papers announce that New England is being organized for the Ku Klux Klan and that already one branch of this organization exists in Boston. It is absolutely unbelievable that there are people in this community who would join such an organization.

Of course, we have to bear with fools and knaves who spend their time denouncing Jews, Catholics, Protestants, Christian Scientists and other faiths to which large and responsible and desirable elements of our people are devoted. It is a fundamental principle of our American democracy that men may express their opinions freely, even though those opinions be offensive to an immense majority of our citizens and bring those who utter them into contempt and even loathing. We must bear the annoyance and the humiliation of such nuisances, because to suppress them would be doing a greater evil to our free government and, to the principles which underly it, than these "nuts" could possibly do.

We must deal with such organizations as the Ku Klux Klan and with such reactionaries as exist in organizations like the Harvard Liberal Club, by the power of public opinion. There is nothing to prevent us from ostracizing men who have no greater appreciation of American principles which require tolerance of all honest beliefs and forbid secret machinations against anything. There is something mean and cowardly in the character of a man who would join an organization with the principles and policies attributed to the Ku Klux Klan.

Proposed Tariff on Oil

New England Representatives in Congress Should Fight It in Interest of Their Districts

Mr. Eugene C. Hultman, State Fuel Administrator, has addressed a protest to the Finance Committee of the United States Senate against the proposed Fordney tariff, of twenty-five cents a barrel on fuel oil and thirty-five cents on crude oil.

Mr. Hultman tells the Senate committee that this schedule will take from the pockets of the people of New England more than $5,000,000 this Winter. It is worse even than this. It will help to destroy the competition between coal and oil and will enable the coal companies to practice more extortion at the expense of New England people.

Mr. Hultman says:

Prohibitive freight rates eliminate the Western and Southern oil fields of the United States as the source of supply for the Eastern industrial section, leaving foreign oil the only alternative to the Eastern manufacturer when confronted with unfair practices in the coal trade, interruptions of domestic transportation, or cessation of work of the mines.

The fuel administrator calls attention to the fact that 22 per cent. of New England fuel is now supplied by oil from Mexico. Discrimination against Mexican oil, therefore, will be a serious thing for New England.

We respectfully call the attention of our New England representatives in Congress to this fact and hope they will be able to protect New England business better than they succeeded during the preliminary consideration of the Fordney tariff.

STRANGE CHEMISTRY OF LIVING THINGS

Surprising Part Played by Copper in Composition of Animals—How Nature Generally "Kills Two Birds With One Stone."

By Garrett P. Serviss

THERE is a branch of modern science known as biological chemistry, that is to say, the chemistry of life or of living things. It is along the ways of this science that some enthusiastic investigators hope to come upon the inmost secret of organic existence, including even the secret of what we call our psychic experiences—the secret, for instance, of thought, of will and all mental no less than all physical action taking place in a living being. Some would perhaps not hesitate to say that even the soul is nothing more than a phenomenon of biological chemistry.

It is not likely that we shall live to see so extraordinary a discovery as that, but, nevertheless, the disclosures and advances that these secrets are continually making often possess great interest in themselves, while offering suggestions of the possibility of further revelations that may give a sensational boost to human knowledge.

Part Played By Copper

Lately some suggestive facts have come out concerning the unexpectedly large part that the element copper plays in both plant and the animal world, but more especially the animal. It has long been known that copper enters into the composition of the blood of such animals as crayfish, and that combined in a certain form it constitutes in those animals a peculiar substance which is essential to their respiration, acting in that way like the haemoglobin, or coloring matter of the red corpuscles, whose function in the blood of man and other vertebrate animals is to convey oxygen from the lungs throughout the body. In a similar manner a substance called haemocyanin serves to distribute oxygen from the respiratory apparatus through the blood of crayfish, cephalopods and other non-vertebrate animals.

Now, this peculiar substance, haemocyanin, contains copper in place of the iron that is the active agent in the haemoglobin of man and his vertebrate relatives. The copper in one case plays the same part as the iron in the other. But while the iron colors the blood of the vertebrate animals red, the copper makes that of the invertebrates who are supplied with haemocyanin blue—in some cases a deep indigo blue.

Here, then, the master chemist, nature, has employed two different elements to effect a similar process in the bodies of two of her great classes of animals. Copper is preponderous to man, but it is a part of the blood of life for certain animals below him in the scale of existence as we arrange it.

Now, it may be laid down as a general rule that nature habitually "kills more than one bird with the same stone." Although we may not find out just how, yet it is likely that something more than a difference in the color of the blood is concerned in the possession of a copper respiratory pigment by one set of animals and an iron respiration pigment by another set.

It may turn out to be significant in this regard that among the animals recently proved to possess copper in their blood are all the chief orders of insects. This fact has recently been clearly brought out by Dr. R. A. Muttkowski, of the University of Idaho. He incinerated the blood and also entire specimens of more than thirty species of insects, and upon analyzing the ash always found that it contained copper.

The same fact was similarly demonstrated with regard to spiders, small crustacea, daddy longlegs, centipedes, snails and slugs. But no copper is found when human or other vertebrate blood is incinerated.

Peculiar Sense Organs

What follows is, of course, only a fanciful suggestion in the present state of knowledge, but, remembering what has above been remarked about nature's tendency to make one thing account for many in her economy, it may be pointed out that the insects and other animals enumerated as possessing copper instead of iron in their blood are not only widely different in their anatomical structure from the vertebrates, but that they possess very peculiar sense organs, which in many cases seem to be subject to different stimuli from those that affect the eyes, ears, noses and touch organs of the backboned races.

It may not be too wild a flight to recall in this connection the fact that copper is an element having very marked electrical properties, while the performances of insects with their antennae and in other ways give the attentive observer the impression that some subtle means of communication is possessed by them in which we and our congeners do not share.

In any event, using copper in the blood is apparently a primitive practice of nature, for haemocyanin has been found in the limulus, an animal sometimes said to have the longest unbroken line of descent in the whole life history of this globe, since its direct ancestors appeared in the dawn of time and have their humble mausoleums in the rocks of every geological age.

To the Editor

Christian Science

Editor Boston American:

Christian Science is one of the subjects on which Dr. Charles Fleischer should not allow himself to speak. Doubtless as a Jewish rabbi he can speak intelligently of Judaism; but by writing of Christian Sciences without more appreciation, he makes himself a ridiculous oracle.

Take for instance his article in the Boston American of last Saturday. In that article, he attempted to put into one class "Christian Science and New Thought and Applied Psychology and Correspondence Schools and House Organs and Optimistic Advertising," and attempted to stamp these subjects together as substitutes for "Clear Thought and Strong Will and Hard Work." Such an effort was the very opposite of clear thought; it was an instance of muddled dogmatism. Speaking only for Christian Science, I can say that it inculcates the clearest thinking, also one in human affairs of the divine will, and the most persistent work. Indeed, as Mrs. Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, has said: "The song of Christian Science is, "Work—work—work—watch and pray." (Message to the Mother Church of 1900, page 2.)

A FEW WORDS OF ENCOURAGEMENT

If you have never been sick and despondent, you have no idea how much good two or three words of encouragement can do.

A good practical woman, not at all given to moping or to indulging in gloomy thoughts, was heard to say that illness brought her to complete despair, and one day she gave up mutually.

She mentioned to a friend that "she expected never to be any better," but the friend came back with such a cheery, bracing reply in a warm, hopeful tone, "There, there, you must not give up," and it marked the turning point in the road to health.

Every time she felt badly that strong, smooth, happy voice rang in her ears: "There there, you must not give up."

She did not want to give up and she did not give up.

But it was the quickening force of those cheery words which gave her confidence and awakened her to the fact that she must not give up.

It is said that a Yankee can always find a way out, no matter what the dilemma or the trouble, because he is ingenious.

Pioneers had to be inventive and self-confident, and it is that spirit which overcomes difficulties, now as well as in days of the first "Yank."

AUNT SUE'S VISIT IS FULL OF CHEER

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

THERE came first a great array of boxes and bags, and we knew that Aunt Sue was coming on her annual visit. She always announces her arrival by the sending of her hand luggage on ahead of her.

She arrives from her far-away home in the mountains in the morning. It is an all night ride from Tinkerstown and she cannot wait to see the shops—just to get a little peek at them before she settles down for her two weeks' visit with us.

So about luncheon time, here she came—and we welcome her with full hearts, for one and all we love Aunt Sue, and she always has made us at home when we dropped down upon her in one of our panting motors among the hills.

After a cup of tea and some more solid comforts, we began to question our visitor about her neighbors and her farm and the things we knew about her home—but Aunt Sue was interested only in what she had seen and was seeing here in the city.

She brushed away our inquiries about Uncle Homer, and came right down to what she had observed that morning in the shop windows, and on the counters of the places she had entered to ask the prices.

As She Sees the City

"High—prices are high," she said. "But things are awfully enticing. Those knit shoulder shawls almost tempted me. And as for hats—there never were such hats to be seen. I expected, from the way the paper talked, to see the skirts way down to the instep, but no. I can't see that they are much shorter or much longer than they were last Fall, when I was visiting here.

"And as for that, I am rather glad, for I dread to see long skirts in fashion again. They can't be too short for me, I can tell you. When I remember the trailing skirts we used to wear, I'm ashamed to think I ever followed that fashion. I wish the waists were a little higher in the neck, though, especially for the girls with necks that would be a little better for the hiding—just a little bit of lace or crepe or something that would give the imagination a chance.

"The wearing of pumps and slipper-like shoes on the streets keeps up, and—well, it may do on the streets as smooth as silk and as clean as can be, but for ordinary wear I do like a shoe with a good sole. But the hats, as I said are too fine for words."

The girls of the family were delighted, for they knew in their hearts that their generous aunt would take the three of them to the milliners and buy for each a beautiful hat before she left for her mountain home.

"You see," said Aunt Sue, "I have no children of my own—no one to spend my money on—and I love to come and pick and choose for you girls just what you want, once in a while. And of all the things you could wear this year, hats, I say, are the most lovely."

At last we got time to ask Aunt Sue about the girl she "rescued" from the millenery shop last Fall and took home with her. The girl was so thin and pale and "peaked," to use Aunt Sue's expression, that we all wondered how she could stand her hard life of trying on hats for the world of fashion day after day. Aunt Sue didn't take out her interest in wondering. She talked with poor Rose Marie until the two became well acquainted, and then, some way, she coaxed the girl to go home with her for a long visit.

Every time she felt badly that strong, smooth, happy voice rang in her ears: "There there, you must not give up."

She did not want to give up and she did not give up.

But it was the quickening force of those cheery words which gave her confidence and awakened her to the fact that she must not give up.

Rose Marie's Transformation

"Rose Marie is well and happy," said Aunt Sue. "She has learned to drink milk from my Jersey cow, and she makes bread and biscuits and cake. She sets the table and always has a bouquet in the middle of it, and she doesn't have to look at a hat unless she wants to. She has learned to drive the automobile, and every hen and chicken on the place, every cat, dog, horse and cow known and loved her. She is well and has rosy cheeks and bright eyes, and that isn't all.

"Young Grant Hathaway has seen those rosy cheeks and shining eyes, and I can tell you there's going to be a wedding in my house some day. Grant is as good a man as ever stepped."

"Oh, Aunt Sue," we all cried, "ask us to the wedding."

"I certainly shall," said Aunt Sue. And we know she will.

TRY TO LIVE AS LONG AS THE RACE

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

DON'T you wish you were a lunatic, a lover, or a poet?

Perhaps, if you are a poet or of poetic temperament, you are always all three in one!

With poetic imagination, we can give body to memory, and we can shape into material reality the bodiless fancies of our brains. Man's imagination gives him a wonder word of creative power. If we chose, each of us could live as long as Methuselah (969 years)—or longer.

Why not? With the aid of imagination, you can now live practically as long as the race has lived. And you can make further draft upon the timelessness of the future.

Practically, each of us is already as old as the race; for this age is, in a very literal sense, the heir of all the ages: and each of us is the personal inheritor of all the achievement of mankind.

Each of us is the epitome of all human history; and there is locked up, in us, all the story of mankind's past and even the prophecy of his future.

Human Memory

It remain for you and me to unlock the treasure house of human memory, and also to acquire what we can of the gift of prophecy.

Backward-working and forward-looking imagination is our means of access to the treasure and of achievement of this gift. The measure of the cultivation of our imagination will also be the measure of the actual length of our life.

Imagination, working backwards, allows us to recreate—and so to live within ourselves—the past of the human race. And that same poetic power, looking forward, permits us to create the future.

If you succeed completely, then you can live as long as the race!

All of which is not so wholly fanciful as at first it may sound.

If our histories were well-written—instead of being merely or mainly the record of the migrations of mankind and the account of the wars of peoples and of dynasties—then they would be the ready and accessible means of individually acquiring the memory of the past of our human species.

Since the essentia. significance of Man is in his spiritual nature, which differentiates him from the lower orders of being, some day we shall have a history of mankind in one hundred pages, which will tell us convincingly the simple story of the evolution of the human spirit, from the earliest time to our own day.

Such a history would make it easy for each of us to share all of the past life of the race, so as to lengthen our life by hundreds of thousands of years of vicarious living!

Inadequate Means

As it is our histories—poor as they are and, at the most, national rather than universally human stories—are painfully inadequate means for the study of the biography of mankind.

What you can learn from the books about biology of our species and of our effort to build a permanent home on this planet—and of our attempts to express our understanding of ourselves and of our relation to the universe (the story which the variety of religions so eloquently tells) all this is a poor preparation for knowledge of the past of our kind than all the libraries of false history ever written.

And for such knowledge you need be neither learned nor scholarly, but only "of imagination all compact."

So far there has been, relatively speaking, so little of essential change in our human nature, that if you study it intensively you can know it practically through its whole extent.

Your best means of intensive study of mankind is yourself.

If you study yourself honestly, you will know yourself—not only as lunatic, lover and poet, but as savage, barbarian and civilized man. You will live as long as the race, by sharing all the life of the race, all of its struggle, experience, and unfoldment of spirit.

For your individual story is the essence of all human history.

And your imagination even endows you with the power to prophesy somewhat of that which we shall be, and so borrow a bit of Man's future.

MADE QUITE SURE.

A company in the Soudan had decided to lay a railway into the wilds and many blacks were employed in its construction.

One day the telegraph clerk at the nearest civilized spot received a telegram from the negro foreman of the railway concerning: "Two boss dead. Shall I bury him?"

"Yes," wired back the clerk. But first make sure that he is quite dead. Will send another white boss tomorrow."

A few hours later another telegram came from the foreman: "Buried boss. Made sure he was quite dead. Hit him on the head with a shovel."
